CHEKIANG SET BACK 2 MILES ON HUANGTU FRONT

Nanking Colonel Captured In Fierce Liuho Combat

REPORTS OF ULTIMATUM FROM CHANG ARE DENIED

Official Repudiation Is Issued By Peking

CENSORSHIP ON

Two Journalists Are Taken Into Custody

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, September 5.—A Consular telegram from Mukden, in reply to an official inquiry, states that the letter of Marshal Chang Tso-lin to President Tsao Kun did not contain threats such as were published by the Kuo Wen News Agency.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, September 1.—In conversation with a foreign visitor recently Marshal Chang Tso-lin stated that he would not move troops unless Marshal Wu sent troops to reinforce Marshal Chi Hsien-yuan, in which case he would bring an army into Chihli.

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, September 4.—Strict censorship of press as well as ordinary telegrams has been instituted here since the end of last month.

Yesterday, an editor of the Kuo Wen News Agency and an editor of the World News Agency were taken into custody by the Chinese authorities. The news agency employe is charged with publishing a circular telegram from Marshal Chang Tso-lin to President Tsao Kun.

Later.—The Peking representative of the Kuo Wen News Agency was summoned to the

Chekiang Forced Back In Hottest Fighting So Far On Huangtu-Kiating Line

Ho Feng-lin's Troops Are Obliged To Take Defensive As Reinforcements Arrive For Kiangsu; Still Cling To Huangtu Station

BY TALBOT PATRICK

Nanziang, Sept. 5, 6:30 p.m.—Superior forces of Kiangsu soldiery have forced back the Chekiang line on a ten-mile front from Huangtu to Kiating and reports here indicate that the northern attack is general to the banks of the Yangtsze.

The fighting last night and today is the sharpest since the war began.

At the railway, the southerners have been on the defensive since a heavy attack began last night. Their opponents are believed to have been heavily reinforced and the number of those seen advancing is greater than that of the soldiery blocking the way.

At dusk tonight, the advanced infantry line of the Chekiang army was still clinging tenaciously to the shelter of the Huangtu station and the embankments there, but there was a decided threat that the station garrison might be cut off by a sudden dash on either side of the line under cover of dark.

The southern battery near the line, which I inspected yesterday, is thought to have been put out of action, and shrapnel from northern field guns is bursting at intervals about two miles from Nanziang station. The bursts which were marked by puffs of whitish smoke by day now appear as vicious red flashes in the air.

Since morning no trains have been run to Huangtu because of shell fire directed upon them as soon as they appear within range of the Kiangsu artillery. Cars of a rtain run part way up the early part of the afternoon, the last one to the time of writing, were returned loaded with supplies which had been piled on the Huangtu platform for days.

FORCE WAY FORWARD

During the night's fighting, the Kiangsu men forced their way forward more than two miles until they gained a foothold in the edge of the town of Kiating.

With a house-to-house struggle in prospect, the advance was not so vigorously prosecuted during the day. Meanwhile, a heavy counter-attack is in prospect for tonight.

For this purpose 2,000 hardy fighters from the command of the veteran Fukien lader, General Yang Hua-chao, were rushed up to Nanziang in three special trains this morning. From the station they were marched to a large canal running from Nan-

PASSERBY IS SLAIN DURING PISTOL FIGHT

Another Wounded As Policeman Exchanges Shots With Armed Robbers

One Chinese passerby was killed dead, and a second was seriously wounded last night in a pistol battle staged between a Sikh constable and a gang of five armed robbers at Peking and Chekiang roads, after the bandits had held up an exchange and cigarette shop at No. 10 Woo Foo Loong, between Tientsin and Ningpo roads.

The man who was killed was riding by in a ricsha at the time, and the wounded man was a pedestrian who happened to come in the line of fire. They were rushed to Shantung Road Hospital,

This shows the opposing Chekiang and Kiangsu armies as they were when the northerners developed their heavy push forward yesterday. In the evening the retreated southerners extended from just west of Liuho through part of Kiating to Huangtu, with a corresponding salient in the Kiangsu front across the railway. The Chekiang troops were to counter-attack last night at Kiating, midway between Liuho and Huangtu, the two scenes of heaviest fighting yesterday.

STREET FIGHTING ENDS IN TAKING MANY WAR PRISONERS YESTERDAY

Over 400 Kiangsu Men Killed In Liuho Encounter When Counter-Attack Was Repulsed By Second Regiment Of 24th Mixed Brigade; Chekiang Casualties Over Seventy

Liuho and vicinity is cleared of Kiangsu troops following serious street fighting yesterday morning, according to news given out by the Lunghua headquarters yesterday. A large number of war prisoners, including Colonel Chi Ju-tung, in command of the second regiment of Fourth Kiangsu mixed brigade, were captured. Col. Chi has been interned at the Shangtung Guild in Lunghua, following a brief trial yesterday afternoon. Chekiang troops are now reported to be threatening Tachang.

At 10:50 o'clock yesterday morning, Kiangsu forces, consisting of the fourth mixed brigade under Wu Hung-tsang, conducted a counter-attack against Liuho. The Chekiang forces were headed by General Yang Hua-chao, who ordered a slight retreat into the northern part of the village. When the invaders had about occupied this part, Yang's forces dashed across the enemy and cut the offensive line into two. Street fighting then ensued. In the melee, Colonel Chi was seen directing his men to retreat and was seized. He was rushed back to Lunghua at noon. Following a short examination by Colonel Teng, he was sent to the Shantung Guild where all the courtesies usually shown to war prisoners were extended to him.

A large number of other prisoners of war was also captured in the drive. Each had a red badge on his arm, bearing the characters which mean "Don't forget the six principles." Upon inquiry, it was found that the six principles were "Be brave but don't be proud," "Advance and don't retreat," "Rather die than to be defeated," "It is better to assault than to hold," "Patience will bring victory" and "Bravery will check the enemy."

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon, it was reported that Liuho has been cleared of all Kiangsu troops

PEKING EVADES PROPOSALS FOR NEUTRAL ZONE

Accepts Responsibility For Lives and Property Of Foreigners

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, September 4.—In reply to the warning recently given to the Chinese Government by the British minister on behalf of the Ministers of the Four Powers regarding the protection of lives and property of foreigners in the warfare between Kiangsu and Chekiang the Waichiaopu yesterday through its representatives notified all the foreign Legations concerned to the effect that the Chinese Government holds itself responsible for the security of lives and property of foreigners.

The Waichiaopu, however, failed to give a definite answer to the proposition from the Diplomatic Body that the region of Shanghai and Woosung be made a strictly neutral zone.

Native City Trembles As Rumor Of Looting Spreads

Reports were in circulation last night that some looting had taken place in the Chinese City, although no details could be obtained, nor was there any confirmation. Heavy forces of constabulary patrolled the narrow streets of the city, but everywhere there was a decided feeling of nervousness, mostly the result of the stories told by the thousands of refugees who have been pouring into Shanghai within the past few days.

Although some of the shops closed their doors during the day, evidently in fear of looting, there was no verification for the rumor that a general strike had been declared among the shopkeepers as a protest move against the conscription measures adopted by the military.

Despite proclamations and manifestos issued by both General Ho Feng-lin, Defense Commissioner for Shanghai and Sungkiang, and Col. Lu Yung-chien, chief of the Woosung and Shanghai Constabulary, to the effect that conscription of labor was forbidden, impressing of coolies went on in Chapei and other Chinese districts surrounding Shanghai.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

In one proclamation, General Ho Feng-lin declared that he had ordered taken strict precautions in connection with the recruiting of laborers for service with his armies. Among other measures, he said, he had ordered capital punishment for those who fail to pay wages to conscripted coolies; those who extort money under the cloak of recruiting coolies, and those who attempt to conscript women.

The Chinese press yesterday carried reports that while several boatloads of conscripted coolies were proceeding up Soochow Creek near the Sinza Road Bridge at 3 o'clock yesterday morning on their way to Luiho, the conscripted men started a general break for freedom by jumping into the creek. Soldiers who were stationed in the boats as guards, checked the movement, but several of the coolies who succeeded in jumping overboard are said to have drowned.

A delegation of merchants from Chapei called on Col. Lu Yung-chien to protest against the conscription. They were received by Col. Lu's chief secretary, who assured them that the men would not be forced to work against their will, and that their pay would be raised to 100 copper cents a day.

LU NAMED MAGISTRATE

Another proclamation by General Ho Feng-lin states that he has appointed Col. Lu Yung-chien as magistrate of the military courts to administer martial law.

Police of the West Hongkew station were called to Boundary Road and North Chekiang Road Thursday evening by reports that a big crowd of civilians were doing guard duty in the vicinity of the railway station. On arrival, the police found a huge crowd, made up principally of loafers, who were standing on the Settlement Road and hurling stones at the soldiers. The soldiers, being unable to enter Settlement territory, were helpless, and the huge crowd was cheering on the attackers. Police quickly dispersed the mob. After it was all over, it was ascertained that one soldier had suffered a slight cut on the forehead as a result of having been hit by a stone.

SOLDIERS STRAY IN SETTLEMENT; ARMS ARE TAKEN

Police Constables Pick Up Two Stragglers At Food-Shop

Illustrative of the strict precautionary measures being taken by Settlement authorities to prevent the entrance into the Settlement of armed soldiers was the arrest Thursday night by Police Constables Bell and Young of West Hongkew station of two Chekiang soldiers, who, fully armed, had strayed across the Settlement boundary to obtain some food.

The two men were found in a foodshop at 223-4 Boundary Road by the police constables. They said that they were guarding ammunition en route from the Arsenal to the railroad station, that they had become hungry, and, attracted by the sight of the foodshop and not knowing that they were straying into the Settlement, they went over the line to get something to eat.

Their arms included two .32 caliber automatic pistols, sixty holsters, two pouches, two pistol magazines and one sword.

After they had been disarmed, the two men were escorted to the Settlement Boundary. The arms are being held by the police.

URGE BRITAIN TO BACK PLAN TO INTERVENE

London Press Understands U.S. Is Likely To Take Lead In Revising Scheme

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 5.—The Daily Telegraph declaims against the Foreign Office's apparent indifference towards the events in China. It declares that official news received in London is not only belated as compared with press reports but is much more incomplete.

The journal understands that Washington is likely to take the lead in revising last year's interventionist suggestinos, and expresses the opinion that Britain should be the first to support any proposals for protecting the interests of foreigners in China and safeguarding railway communications. It points out that obvious limits are at present set to intervention, but says that much can be done to improve the situation in the regions where foreign influence can readily be exercised.

CARL'S CAR IS BACK; GOES IN HIS COLLECTION

Bullet Holes Tell Story Of Engagement At Liuho

Carl's car come back yesterday. And now, Carl Crow, advertising expert by trade and adventurer by liking, has another specimen to add to his collection of silver plaques, momentoes, etc., towit, one Ford motor car, touring model 1924, with two bullet holes through its body.

It will be recalled that Carl on Thursday, with a view to ascertaining whether there really was a war, took Mrs. Peter B. Kyne and Miss Ruth F. Ohlson to Liuho. They found the war—in fact they found so much of it that they were obliged to run four miles under shell and rifle fire, dropping all thoughts of motor car, chauffeur, and everything else except their lives.

At last reports Thursday night, Carl's chauffeur was converting a portion of the Liuho roadway into a muddy pond with his tears, while lying flat on his tummy 'neath the none-too-sure protection of the motor car.

Yesterday, however, chauffeur and car showed up at Carl's office, the chauffeur smiling, although a bit wanly. He had spent the night under the car at Liuho, with occasional bullets still spattering about, as evidenced by the holes in the car. In the morning, deciding that master was either dead or safe in Shanghai, he started back, and with three wounded soldiers in the car as his passport, reached Shanghai safely.

News Or Excuses?

One of the Shanghai morning newspapers yesterday in the course of its account of the fighting between Kiangsu and Chekiang troops in the vicinity of Nanziang had this paragraph:

"It is now at last possible to obtain military passes to go to Nanziang: until yesterday no foreigner except the railway officials had been allowed to go even as near the fighting as this. But there does not appear to be much advantage in going, as access to the front itself is still strictly barred and the only available news of the fighting is in the form of communiques which naturally give only the Chekiang side of the counter."

This was a nice way of explaining to its readers on the part of the newspaper in question, that it has failed up to the present to obtain any actual first-hand news of what was happening at the front. The China Press as our readers are well aware has had military passes for members of its staff since the very beginning of hostilities and on Thursday our Mr. Patrick got as far as the rail-head at Huangpu and heard the bullets whistling and saw the Red Cross collecting wounded men from the field.

CANAL SHIPS TO TIENTSIN ARE HEAVILY BOOKED

River Lines Also Reporting Big Demand As Rail Service Ends

The complete tie-up of the railway line between here and Nanking, has resulted in such an increased business for the river and coast-wise steamers that accommodations are almost at a premium.

Butterfield and Swire, Jardine, Matheson and Co. and the China Merchants' Line all report heavy bookings. The B. and S. steamers are able to book passage now from Shanghai north, from September 9, but they have had no official word from their Tientsin offices as to whether the demand for tickets Shanghaiward has been unduly heavy, although unofficially it is believed that this is the case.

The Jardine boats are carrying their usual quota of passengers from Weihaiwei for this season of the year. The increase per boat of passengers who are prevented from travelling by rail averages about twelve.

Other steamship officers with boats plying up and down the Yangtsze between Shanghai and Nanking report an increase demand for accommodations.

Mail For Nanking Is Sent By Boats Through Sungkiang

The Chinese Post Office here has made arrangements to dispatch mail to Soochow, Nanking and all other points where communication with Shanghai has been interrupted by reason of the war and subsequent tie-up of the railroad.

Mail for the cities in the affected zone is sent daily from Shanghai at 9 p.m. and goes via steamer to Sungkiang. From Sungkiang it is forwarded to Soochow and adjacent points by launch or small boats. This effective utilisation of China's system of waterways results in but little delay, delivery being accomplished in approximately one and a half days after posting.

Chekiang Holds Liuho After All-Day Battle

Liuho, Sept. 5, 8 p.m.—Such jubilation and confidence as men who have been fighting and facing death all day long can feel, reigned supreme in Liuho headquarters this evening. Bullets from Kiangsu rifles zinged remindingly but harmlessly overhead, while a few yards away Chekiang rifles barked continuously and artillery boomed often enough to interrupt very protracted conversation; but Chang Yi-cheng, commander of the 2nd regiment of the 24th Mixed Brigade—the hero of the day's fighting around Liuho—felt no fear of further attack from the Kiangsu side during the night nor on the morrow.

Chang Yi-chang with about 2,000 seasoned Fukien troops and 25 field guns arrived in Liuho by motor transportation at about 8 o'clock this morning, having come from Hangchow to Shanghai on Thursday. They were just in the nick of time and saved Liuho to the Chekiang forces.

Early this morning a Kiangsu force estimated at 4,000 started working around from the north of Liuho towards the east and by the middle of the forenoon had worked their way into Liuho itself from the backside of the firing line. Chekiang up till this morning had had a force of approximately 1,000 men scattered around the northerly outskirts of the town. These had either been beaten back or voluntarily retreated in the face of the superior number of the Kiangsu attackers.

BAYONET CHARGE

Kiangsu soldiers occupied fully half of Liuho, having reached the stream which divided the town, when the Fukien troops, freshly arrived, were let loose on them. With fixed bayonets they charged, and Chang Yi-chang personally stated that the Kiangsu men had run for all they were worth and had made 15 li in the direction of their own lines by nightfall.

Kiangsu is said to have lost 400 in killed and wounded as against 70 on the Chekiang side. Prisoners were taken and guns, the leader of the Kiangsu attack heading the list of prisoners.

Such was the story told a CHINA PRESS representative by Chang Yi-chang this evening over a cup of tea in a small room of a small house on the edge of the Shanghai-Liuho road. The room was crowded with soldiers in the familiar, "at ease" way, but withal there was a certain amount of camaraderie between officers and men which seems to characterise the Chekiang troops.

We started from Shanghai shortly after four o'clock in the afternoon under the apprehension that it would be impossible to reach Liuho, especially as no lights were

Chronicles From The Courts

By "Chameleon"

There are some hard-boiled cops in Shanghai who ought to be in the front-line ditches doing their bit for the almost-victorious army. Chinese constable 1083 had the misfortune—a mutual misfortune, it should be added—to make the acquaintance of a couple of them on Hankow Road Wednesday afternoon.

Woo Sai and Foo Siau Rien-tz are the euphonious monikers of the two hard guys. They were busily loading their wheelbarrows on the abovementioned thoroughfare when the constable approached. When all the pomp of power suitable to his position the representative of the law informed them that they were blocking the sidewalk, and he would appreciate their vacating the spot without delay. They demurred. He insisted. They objected. He told them pointedly and emphatically that he was not going to argue with them, and it was their next move.

It was. Chinese constable 1381 tells the rest of the story. Te had seen a whirlwind down Hankow Road from which came sounds as of human voices in rage and pain. He went to the spot, and distinguished a brother constable being heartily and enthusiastically hammered by the two proletarians. Nothing loth, he took a hand in the game himself, and he and the other constable soon got the two to the station, where they were charged with an assault upon a policeman. They appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday, and explained that the constable had led before they countered. In fact, they hadn't really countered, but had behaved like true non-resistants and turned the other cheek. The physical appearance of the constable, however, hardly bore out the latter statement, and they were given the choice of a $5 fine or five days each.

The complex question as to a wife's right to the contents of her husband's pockets was touched upon in Court here yesterday. Not that the matter was put so baldly as all that. The charge, with the usual legal custom of generality, was one of larceny, a lady by same of Kyong Ling-sung being accused by one Tick Singhai of having helped herself to divers articles of his personal belongings to which she was not entitled.

The ladyy denied the charge, and stated furthermore that she, to her shame and sorrow, was the legally wedded wife of the accused, and implied that there were certain marital rights not the least of which was the nocturnal search for funds, a privilege, be it remarked, not confined to our benighted sisters of the Orient.

The lady produced two witnesses to prove that she was properly married to the complainant. One witness was present at the wedding, and said so. The second, Mr. Tsha, was still better acquainted with the details of the great occasion, as he had arranged the marriage himself. Tick's first spouse, he explained, had passed away in the fifth noon last year, and the widower had appealed to Tsha to find him a substitute. The affair was urgent, it appears, and the nuptial rites took place a couple of months after the bereaved one was bereft.

The lady, on the stand, said she had left the complainant because she did not care to share the early demise of spouse No. 1. On the ninth of last month husband Tick and his son had amused themselves by knocking her around the place, and the lady not unnaturally decided to take her departure, though this was all she had taken. She had gone to her sister's where by the grace of God and the Court she was going to stay.

The Court dismissed the case.

New York Italians Fight As Locatelli, Aviator, Arrives

(Reuter's Service)

New York, Sept. 5.—When the airman Signor Locatelli arrived at the Grand Central Station yesterday evening, the police reserves had to be called out to prevent a riot between rival factions among the crowd of five thousand Italians. Cheers for Locatelli were countered by shouts of "Down with Locatelli and the Fascisti." Signor Locatelli's supporters rushed into taxicabs and hurried to the hotel.

and the Chekiang men were threatening Tachang.

SPIES ARRESTED

Two spies were arrested near the Woosung Forts by the local military authorities yesterday and sent to the Lunghua Arsenal. According their statements, the Nanking army is changing its objective from Liuho to Woosung and strong forces are heading this way to capture the forts.

The second regiment of the 24th mixed brigade under the command of Chang Yi-chen was motored out to Liuho yesterday morning and immediately joined with the soldiers along the front line of defence. They had six machine guns and a dozen cases of ammunition. Over ten carloads of Chekiang troops and laborers were sent to the Huangtu front yesterday morning from the Markham Road station.

In the Liuho engagement, severe losses were sustained by Kiangsu. Over 400 were killed, while the Chekiang casualties number about 70. The Kiangsu army was superior in number, over 4,000 being engaged, while the Chekiang side had but 2,000.

Chi Hsieh-yuan arrived in Quinsan yesterday and will return to Changchow today.

Two Japanese reporters are reported to be missing. They left here for Nanziang on Thursday by motor car and failed to return. The chauffeur came back to Shanghai with his car on Thursday when fighting became intense.

(Eastern News Agency)

Tokio, Sept. 5.—With reference to the opening of hostilities between Kiangsu and Chekiang, the Japan Advertiser today writes to the following effect:—

"No matter whether the present warfare in China will be localised or Marshal Chang Tso-lin and Marshal Wu Pei-fu will after all participate in the fighting, the effect will be nothing but the transition of individual power.

"While General Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu attempts to place Shanghai within the sphere of his own influence and to strengthen his ground in that district, General Lu Yung-hsiang is striving to hold the same region for similar purpose. Even if Marshal Chang and Marshal Wu were to rise in arms against each other, the motive of the war is different from that involving the Fengtien-Chihli war some two years ago.

"Although Marshal Wu's moral character and principle in waging war against Fengtien at that time won great admiration among foreigners the same foreigners who then confided in the Chihli faction have now come to realise that Marshal Wu is to be ranked on the same level with the rest of the tuchuns or militarists in China. Both Marshal Chang and Marshal Wu equally speak of China's unification, but their object is nothing more nor less than to control the whole land of China. At any rate, whoever will come out victorious will make no difference to that country, for it is most improbable that even when the present war is over, China will be able to get out of her present plight."

(Eastern News Agency)

Tientsin, Sept. 4.—Commenting on the warfare between Kiangsu and Chekiang, the "Peking and Tientsin Times" says in part:

"Although General Chi Hsieh-yuan of Kiangsu asserts that the object of his fighting against General Lu Yung-hsiang of Chekiang is to effect the unification of the country, be it remembered that it is not Chekiang only that disregards orders from the Central Government but that all the other provinces too are not in reality under the control of the Peking Government, though they pretend to be obedient to to Peking.

"Foreign aviators, who have been engaged by either Chinese individuals or the government, should be strictly controlled by the authorities concerned of their respective home governments, and in case they are engaged in civil wars in China, throwing down bombs they should be punished for manslaughter in accordance with the laws of their respective countries."

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Sept. 4.—The newspapers observe that the safety measures taken by the French Government in order to protect French citizens in Shanghai are absolutely normal in view of the close proximity of the French Concession to the scene of operations.

police yamen on Wednesday and has since been detained there on a charge of circulating a grossly exaggerated version of a communication from Marshal Chang Tso-lin to President Tsao Kun.

Meanwhile, the Agency has issued a "denial," explaining that the original version of its report was couched in very moderate language and that the text published was supplied by its Mukden correspondent.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 5.—Interviewed on Tuesday by a representative of the China Mail News Agency, Marshal Wu Pei-fu's Chief of Staff said that not a single Loyang soldier had joined the mobilisation by hostile provinces against Chekiang. He went on to assert that General Lu Yung-hsiang's appointment of General Tsang Chi-ping as his Chief of Staff and of General Yang Hua-chao as his commandant of troops for a military expedition against neighboring provinces made it necessary for these provinces to take precautionary measures.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 5.—The Kuo Wen News Agency issued a similar report to that circulated in Shanghai by a Japanese news agency to the effect that Marshal Chang Tso-lin had sent an ultimatum to President Tsao Kun, and it appeared in some of the Northern papers, but the report is officially denied.

Reuter's representative is assured by a high Chinese authority, however, that Marshal Chang Tso-lin some time ago did communicate with the President, but the letter is said to be of an unimportant character.

(Eastern News Agency)

Peking, Sept. 5.—With the situation strained, the military authorities of the Peking Government are new strenuously making preparations to transport the 9th Division under the command of General Tong Sheng-kuo to the district of Hsifengkow in order to prepare against the possible attack from the Fengtien troops. The 7th Mixed Brigade at Tungchow also is now transporting arms and ammunition from Nanyuan to the same destination.

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, September 5.—Reports from Mukden say that while the Army of Marshal Chang Tso-lin is probably prepared to march at short notice there has been nothing to indicate his intention to take the field in the near future.

Peking, September 5.—The Tuchuns of Kirin and Heilungkiang have attended a conference at Mukden and left for home on September 3.

Chekiang Set Back Two Miles On Huangtu Front

ziang town to Kiating and embarked in launches and boats towed by the launches for transport to reinforce the Kiating sector and lead the counter attack tonight.

The struggle in the dark will be all the more sanguinary because, like the reported costumes of the Kiangsu soldiery, the Fukien soldiers' uniforms include arm bands. Where reports say that the northerners are wearing red arm bands with characters bidding them remember the Six Orders, the Fukien troops wear red bands with a large yellow circle to the side and front. On the circle is usually written a numerical designations of the command to which the wearer belongs.

Nearly a thousand coolies were run up with the Fukien troops and the majority of these were taken with the soldiers toward Kiating.

While this dark cloud is gathering for the night, the heaviest fighting of the day has been on a front of a mile or so right across the railway.

MANY ARE WOUNDED

Wounded men are coming in in greater numbers and there are so many serious cases that little attention is paid to the arm and leg wounds beyond a first dressing to cover the injury until the man reaches one of the base hospitals. There must be numbers of wounded on other parts of the line receiving still less attention, men unfortunate enough to be far from transportation facilities.

Today I saw the first wounded coolies. I was reliably informed that thirty coolies had been wounded in the vicinity of Huangtu alone during the firing of the night and morning. Soldiers wounded are temporarily bandaged on the firing line and then examined more carefully at Nanziang. Permanganate of potash solution seems to be the antiseptic wash in use.

Despite the threat of far superior forces and the natural instinct of persons whose side is retreating to take an active interest in getting still further away themselves, the troops here are steady and their officers seem quite satisfied with conditions. The individual soldier, detailed as guard on a train to the rear after hours of active service at the front, might be glad to leave what he described with a scattering, dropping motion of his hand as "a rain of bullets."

But the officers expressed confidence in the men on the firing lines to prevent a break-through by an even larger force of the enemy. The Kiangsu men were said to be far inferior in training and even more so in actual fighting experience to the veterans holding them. And the northerners were reported to be paying a heavy penalty as rifle and machine gun fire caught them exposed in their short dashes forward.

KIANGSU LOSES MANY

I could get no estimate in numbers for the losses by the Kiangsu troops in their advances today, but have no doubt in believing them to have been very heavy. The figure for losses by the northerners in the first day of fighting as given out by Chekiang officers, was taken by many persons with a very large pinch of salt, but is possible for me to say that it was obtained by a spy system which has functioned with an effectiveness which is surprising.

It is more than likely that Huangtu station will be abandoned by the Chekiang forces during the night and a position taken up along some canal banks a little further back which afford better cover than the field dikes right at Huangtu. This would also be in line with a strategy semi-officially "suggested" to me.

According to a plan pointed out on my map, the Kiangsu troops' advance on the railroad line has already produced a slight bulge to the east in their lines near Huangtu. Further advance will develop a decided salient.

To the north of this salient the Chekiang army expects to counter attack at Kiating tonight. It is believed that the attacking force may be able to push forward and then swing its fresh troops like a curving sword in an encircling movement down to the railway west of Anting. If the Nanking contingents are as inexperienced as some Chekiang officers say, the estimated possibility of surrounding and capturing a large number of them, with their machine guns and the batteries in action today, begins to assume a slight air of probability.

AN AMBITIOUS PLAN

The plan is an ambitious one, to say the least, but with the factors of veteran troops against green ones working in the dark or at best by moonlight it is a plan whose possible development will give me something to think over until tomorrow.

Nanziang station is more crowded than ever today. For a time the whole siding used for trains passing and the main line beside it as well as a short siding down the line and part of the single line were packed with cars and engines run in until the trains were touching end-to-end.

Several trains are occupied by troops in readiness for a rush to the near front. As the hours pass without a call, the occupants spill out onto the roomier platform and field outside until those left in the cars have room to stretch out. In addition, large additions were made in the night and early morning to the ammunition and supply stores here and it is estimated that there is enough on hand to supply the whole sector for a number of days.

Through the night the troops on the railway line and to either side will play a holding game while their leaders await news from Kiating which may call for a small counter-attack south of the rail line to make a final arc of a circle around some of the northerners. It is a grand "perhaps."

where it was found that the man in the ricsha, whose name has not yet been ascertained, had died instantly from a shot in the abdomen. The other man had a bullet wound in the leg.

According to the proprietor of the cigarette shop, the five men, two of them armed with pistols, came to the shop at about 7:30 o'clock and, after intimidating him and his assistants by the display of pistols, seized $150 and started down Peking Road.

The shop proprietor followed the robbers, and, when he came to a Sikh on patrol duty, pointed out the men to them and reported ther obbbery. The sikh took up the chase down Peking Road toward Chekiang Road. When the robbers realised that they were being followed, they turned and fired three shots. The Sikh then opened fire and fired four shots, but the robbers escaped, running down Chekiang Road.

The neighborhood was crowded with hundreds of Chinese at the time and hundreds followed the wounded men they were taken to hospital.

Russian "White" Officer Stands Trial For Armed Highway Robbery Here

Ooshakoff, Cossack Colonel, Appears In Mixed Court On Serious Accusation; Caught Red-Handed, Charge

Vladimir Ooshakoff, a colonel of Cossacks of note in the Russian "White" forces, appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday on a charge of armed highway robbery here. Mr. Ivanow, Russian Assessor, with whom the accused claims acquaintance, is the foreign representative on the bench.

Ooshakoff was arrested at Haskell and Range Roads last Monday night. Two constables, a Sikh and a Chinese, on duty nearby, saw the Russian struggling with a Chinese, who was shouting for help. They ran up and found the Cossack had an ugly-looking revolver in his hand. The Sikh grasped his arms from behind and the Chinese constable took the weapon away from him, and the Russian was hauled off, fighting and struggling to the station. The case was given a preliminary hearing Tuesday, and remanded until Friday.

In Court yesterday Detective-Sergeant Oldis outlined the case. The defendant was accused of holding up a Chinese with a loaded revolver, demanding money. The policemen had taken the revolver from the man, and C. P. C. 1598 had turned it over to the detective-sergeant. Later the accused had been questioned through an interpreter, and said he knew nothing of the affair. Accused had been drinking, but witness could not say he was drunk.

The complainant, Ho Ming-hwe, a Cantonese tailor with a shop in Chapei, said that on the night of the attempted robbery he had taken a ricsha to Szechuen and Range Roads, and was going along Haskell Road when a foreigner suddenly stopped him and seized his wrist, demanding money. Ho said he had no money, but the man held on to him and whipped out a pistol. The tailor caught hold of his pistol hand—the right hand—and called for help, and a Sikh and a Chinese policeman had come up, seized his assailant, and took the revolver from him. He identified the revolver, with was produced in Court.

Mr. Pereira, a Portuguese, an eye-witness of the struggle between Ooshakoff and the police, was put on the stand. He was walking along Range Road, having come out of the Isis Theater, when he saw the Sikh and the Chinese constable struggling with a foreigner, who had a revolver in his hand. He had run for cover, and shouted to a couple of friends to do the same, and watched the struggle. He saw the Chinese constable snatch the pistol away from the foreigner, but had not seen the latter point the weapon at the complainant. He thought the Russian was not quite sober.

A Chinese eye-witness, who was waiting for a street-car on the corner, gave much the same account as Mr. Mr. Pereira. The Sikh had seized the Russian's arms from behind and the Chinese constable had taken the pistol from him.

Sikh Constable 146, who made the arrest, testified to have heard the complainant call out, and saw him struggling with the accused. He ran up and caught hold of the foreigner, seizing his revolver hand. The man tried to escape, but the Sikh held on to him, and the Chinese constable came up at once and took the revolver away and the Cossack to the police station. He could not say whether the man was drunk or sober. Witness was about fifteen feet away when he was called to.

Chinese Constable 1598 corroborated. He had taken the revolver away from the accused, and had handed it to F. F. S. 102 at the police station, where they took. Ooshakoff.

Mr. Lemeire, for the accused, pleaded not guilty to attempted highway robbery. The accused was a soldier of high rank and always carried the revolver with him. If he had no permit he could be charged under the by-laws.

The accused Cossack, put on the stand, said that he was walking along Range Road, just having got off a ricsha, when the complainant came up and knocked against him. When he turned to grasp the Chinese the latter had struck him and knocked off his pince-nez. He was quite blind without his glasses. A he grasped the tailor two other Chinese ran up and took the revolver out of his pocket.

After this account, the defendant was asked if it was true that after the incident he had explained that he was under the influence of liquor, and remembered nothing. Defendant answered that he was not intoxicated, but was very much excited, and as he did not speak English there may have been a misunderstanding. Asked about the accusation of highway robbery, he said such a charge was amusing, as he was sufficiently known here—to the Russian Assessor as to others—and could get money legally.

Mr. Maitland, for the prosecution, asked what the defendant had had to drink, and suggested that he had drunk too much. The defendant said he had not been intoxicated. Asked how he got the revolver in his hand after the two alleged Chinese had taken it away from him, he said that he had never had it in his hand. Regarding the Chinese constable's statement that he had taken the revolver away from the defendant, he said he did not know, but he might have had the revolver in his hand for a moment. Asked if he had not held the pistol up and pointed it at the defendant, he said if he had had it in that position he would have shot the other. Asked if he had seized the man who he said took the revolver from his pocket, he said he had only grasped the man who had struck him, the complainant. He was in such a terrible condition on account of the loss of his pince-nez that he did not know what was happening, and did not know what had occurred to the alleged Chinese who had taken his revolver. The Prosecutor pointed out that the two policemen who ran up found him struggling only with the complainant.

Russian Constable 250, on the stand, said he had not seen the incident, but all knew the defendant as a brave and honest officer. Witness had written a report regarding the defendant, who was an old friend of his. Witness was in the station when Ooshakoff was brought in, and went to see him, finding him in a terrible condition. The officer had told him not to speak to him or come near him, as he had been dishonored. The officer's St. George's cross was produced in Court.

Mr. Lemeire, for the defense, asked for a remand to enable him to call witnesses. He asked that the defendant be released on bail.

Mr. Maitland said it was certainly not customary to allow bail in armed robbery cases, but he would leave it to the Court. If bail was allowed, it should be substantial bail.

The Court remanded the accused in $300 bail, adjourning the case for an early hearing.

CANTON GIVES WAY SLIGHTLY ON BANK NOTES

Seek To Ease Opposition Of Public Against New Issue

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, August 29.—To ease popular opposition, the Central Bank of Dr. Sun Yat-sen in Canton has announced that all payment of public dues and taxes through it shall be made in the notes of the bank, but persons possessing these notes may have them redeemed at the bank. Shops are not required to give change in silver when these notes are tendered; that is, persons do not have to accept the notes as legal tender.

The Canton Government Mint, which has been turning out many subsidiary coins during the last few weeks, has stopped coinage since August 28. By order of the authorities these coins are now only good for circulation among the people, but not for the payment of taxes, which must be made in the banknotes of the Central Bank.

allowed anywhere on the road after dark and therefore automobiles must be back within the Settlement early, which apprehensions were unfounded.

AUTOS CARRY WOUNDED

Until within two or three miles of Liuho, there was no sound or sign of fighting excepting numerous automobiles, most of them flying Red Cross flags and many of them bearing wounded Chekiang soldiers towards Shanghai. In the fields, Chinese were working as usual and no soldiers were stationed anywhere along the road. The keeper of the toll gate, just outside the Settlement was apparently attempting a bit of profiteering, asking two dollars instead of the customary dollar for allowing an automobile to pass. However, a pass was shown, and the auto continued without interference.

A couple of miles from Liuho, soldiers who said they had been fighting all day were standing at ease by the roadside. They looked tired but, with the exception of muddy feet, seemed to be in excellent trim. A little nearer Liuho two or three companies of troops were deploying through field to the south of the town.

By this time, the cracking of rifles was audible above the purr of the auto, but not until the car drew up at Liuho itself did any bullets whistle within proximity. At the entrance to Liuho, a company of artillery were having their evening meal, there five unused guns of about four inch muzzle mounted on carriages by the side of the road.

Shortly after our arrival, a tall young man in semi-military uniform carrying a cane, approached the automobile with the utmost courtesy and invited an inspection of Liuho. Soldiers were idling about everywhere, none in action, those fighting being concealed behind buildings and embankments in the immediate vicinity.

SCENE OF FIGHTING

Walking through the narrow alley which leads directly from the Shanghai-Liuho road to the bridge over the stream dividing the town, expended bullets and clips were in evidence everywhere. The guide, who proved to be a sergeant of the 2nd regiment, picked up the clips as evidence that the story he told of the invasion of Kiangsu troops into the city itself was no myth. Matting was pulled back from a huddle by the edge of the alley, and the sergeant sated that the dead body was that of a Kingsu man killed during the morning. He had no uniform, but an ugly wound in the head was testimony that he had not died of old age.

Bullets were zipping over the bridge several to the minute, as the serveant led the way over, but he seemed absolutely unconscious of them. While making an inspection of the scene of the morning's fighting, a half- dozen Chekiang soldiers came up with such earnestness that it seemed likely they came to report the enemy had driven them in. After a few sharp words, they returned in the direction they had come, and the sergeant explained that they wanted to stop fighting as their rifles were not shooting properly, the bullets only carrying a short distance. They looked like rather weary fellows who would not despise a good excuse to call it a day, but they returned to their post.

TEA IS SERVED

Returning towards the auto road, the sergeant led the way to a white masonry building from which a young man in khaki emerged, a cane hooked on one arm, and immediately he reached in his pocket and presented his card, as the sergeant had done, in most approved form. Just then, a cannon ten yards away boomed emitting a flash of fire like lightning, and noticing slight confusion on the part of his visitors, Chang Yi-chang led the way to his quarters. Inspection of the card revealed the information that the host was none other than the Hero of the Day.

A lantern lit the small room where the commander ordered chairs and tea brought. Soldiers were resting in corners of the room and more than a score must have crowded into the ten foot square space to hear the commander's relation of the day's victory.

Commander Chang was most frank in replying to questions put to him, stating that Liuho was being held by about 2,800 men, some 2,000 of whom had been brought up by him only that morning. He was particularly elated about the manner in which the Kiangsu men had run when his regiment had attacked during the morning, and he thought that there would be no more trouble in that quarter from the Kiangsu troops unless they were able to bring guns as plentiful and large as those they had seen his men have.

To realise that so important a point as Liuho had been protected by only 1,000 troops until Friday morning when an attack of 4,000 Kiangsu men would have been successful but for the timely arrival a couple of hours earlier of an additional 2,000 soldiers proved rather disappointing to one who had taken the war thus far with a degree of seriousness.

WASTED AMMUNITION

Likewise the apparently profitless firing which was proceeding from both sides lessened one's idea of the seriousness of the whole business. Again, that hand to hand bayonet fighting in cramped alleyways with 7,000 effectives in the vicinity, should have resulted in but 470 casualties, was surprising. In a word, the fighting didn't seem to be determined.

With bullets dropping all around, it would seem inevitable that some of them must take effect and that there should be wounded. There were some killed during the day, apart from the encounter, and there were many cases of serious wounds from which victims will probably not recover. But the most of the cases of wounded were arms wounds, nicked legs, feet and fingers, less than which could hardly be expected from the thousands of bullets which were being fired. If either side expects to win a decided advantage by firing in the general direction of the enemy from a distance of one or two miles, it seems certain that the next generation of soldiers will be ready to fill up the ranks by the time the present fighting forces have been killed off and the surviving side ready to advance. Such is the impression.

The Chekiang troops at Liuho, apparently lacked organisation. General Yang Hua-chao, the Fukien commander in charge of Liuho, visits the post from Nanziang 20 li away, once or twice a day. Otherwise the force there seems to be in charge of a rather young and inexperienced man for the accomplishment Napoleonic feats.

The soldiers themselves seem quite competent to handle their guns and the artillery mechanically. They are all said to be old timers in army life, and those directly questioned reported from 7 to 10 years' service. On the other hand, they seemed to wandering about, more or less as fancy, not conditions, demanded. With an auto of two or three wounded leaving Liuho for Shanghai, there would be from four to six healthy soldiers, supposed to have been fighting all day and not unlikely to be called into action during the night or within a few hours, hanging onto the running-board and any other part of the auto available, riding off to Shanghai to return as opportunity might present itself.

Need For Arbitration Stressed By MacDonald At Assembly Of League

pPrearations For Arms Conference In Which All Nations Of World Would Participate Should Be Made, British Premier Says

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 4.—Dealing with the question of security in the speech at the League Assembly this morning, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald pointed out the difficulty of establishing who the aggressor was. He dwelt on the system of arbitration and said that, if we were not able to elaborate a proper system of arbitration, then we must return to military pacts.

The pact of mutual assistance he went on, should clearly define the nature of the obligation of each State and also when arbitration should operate. He emphasised that the optional arbitration clause should be thoroughly examined before Britain and the Dominions could adhere to it. Arbitration was directed at the problem of armaments, Mr. MacDonald said, and pointed out that as regards naval armaments Britain had fulfilled the Washington Agreemont as she had fulfilled all her agreements.

The way must be prepared for a conference on armaments, as without preparations the conference would be a failure. All nations must participate in that conference. The London Conference had helped to this end.

Great Britain adhered to the Covenant of the League of Nations. She did not desire to weaken it. Certain articles of the Covenant could be embodied in a charter of peace.

The matter should be referred to a committee before the Assembly separated, while members worked to enlighten public opinion in their own countries.

M. Camerlunck translated the whole speech into French.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and M. Herriot warmly shook hands before leaving the Assemoly, which adjourned till the afternoon.

When the debate was resumed, M. Ikrzynski (Poland) strongly favored arbitration and advocated disarmament, but, he said, security must come first.

Mr. Charlton (Australia), who was warmly cheered, urged the convoking of a conference on disarmament without delay. Disarmament was the only sound foundation of the League.

Jonkheer van Karnebeek, explaining why Holland had not subscribed to the guarantee fact, said that for him strict application of the Convenant of the League was sufficient to assure the peace of the world, providing all disputes were submitted to the ruling of the Hague Court.

M. Herriot declared that without arbitration, security and disarmament, International solidarity would be impossible. France joyfully received any proposals of conciliation. France offered all she could offer. She wanted peace, and hoped that the efforts of the League would lead to it.

The former Prime Minister Signor Salandra in a written speech said that Italy gladly associated herself with the views of Mr. Macdonald and M. Herriot, and would willingly cooperate in the work of reconstruction.

(Reuter's Service)

The Hague, Sept. 5.—The Permanent Court of International Justice has elected M. Huber (Switzerland) as President in 1925-27, in succession to Dr. Doder (Netherlands). The change is a very interesting one, in view of the importance of the part the President will play in connection with the Dawes plan.

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, September 5.—The Public galleries of the Assembly were again packed. M. Herriot received an ovation. He said that he hoped that one result of this Assembly would be to consecrate the principle of Arbitration (applause). He declared that the aggressor was the party who refused to abide by an arbitral Award. This assembly had a moral responsibility to the world. Arbitration, security and disarmament were inseparable from each other. Arbitration was as necessary as peace, and must become a reality, and the loyalty of small nations must be protected (loud applause).

The French Premier emphasised the need of upholding justice for all. He endorsed the remarks of "my excellent friend MacDonald" yesterday. He declared that all nations were clamouring for peace, so let them give them peace by International co-operation. He welcomed American co-operation in regard to disarmament, and said that France was not animated by hatred to Germany. France fought German militarism. France adhered to the Covenant, but desired to make it a living thing. France aspired to peace by right and dignity. Owing to her own sufferings, she wished to assuage the sufferings of other nations. He concluded "France is striving for peace."

M. Herriot spoke for forty-five minutes. He was loudly cheered, the whole assembly rising to their feet.

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, Sept. 5.—The newspapers express astonishment and disillusionment at Mr. Macdonald's speech at Geneva, especially the passage relating to armaments and admission of Germany to the League.

The Matin comments bitterly on what it calls Mr. Macdonald's failure to throw light on British plans for disarmament and security, or to explain the rejection of the League's Mutual Assistance Pact.

The Petit Parisien says that the British Government cannot entirely wipe out the former decisions of the Assembly, and describe as a complete failure what can only be regarded as a first effort.

The Petit Journal says that apparently Great Britain herself momentarily is not fearing aggression, and loses interest in the fate of the more exposed nations. The paper truts that M. Herriot will emphasise the French point of view.

The Figaro says that Mr. Macdonald in urging the creation of a system of automatic arbitration seriously modifies the spirit of the League.

The Ere Nouvelle says the speech is far from what was expected of a great British Democrat.

The Oeuvre deplores the negative character of the speech, but is confident that M. Herriot and Mr. Macdonald will find common ground to explore the road leading to justice and peace.

The Gaulois says that it is not admissible to ask France to expose her frontiers by demilitarisation.

The Excelsior says that a formula must be found to reconcile the principle of arbitration with the system of assistance and sanctions.

Former Minister M. Klotz in an interview with the Echo de Paris said that unless the Anglo-French American Pact of 1919 be replaced by a similar guarantee, the left bank of the Rhine will not be evacuated in 1925.

Double the Richness of Ordinary Milk

Carnation Milk, as it reaches your table, has double the richness of ordinary milk. It is pure, full-cream milk, evaporated to the consistency of cream. Only water has been removed.

Where you would use cream, use Carnation just as it comes to you, undiluted. Where you would use milk, add an equal part of water to Carnation, and you have a rich milk of normal consistency.

Carnation is appetising and wholesome. More important still, it is absolutely safe, for it is hermetically sealed in tins and then sterilized.

Carnation milk is convenient to buy and economical to use. Get it regularly from your compradore shop.

Remember that dealers make a larger profit on other brands. Insist that you be supplied with Carnation.

Hongkong-Shanghai Polo Match For Keswick Cup At Race Course To-day

Annual Interport Match To Start At 4:30 This Afternoon At Polo Club

The stage is all set for the annual tussle between the teams of the rival Shanghai and Hongkong Polo Clubs, to decide the China interport championship and the club to hold the Keswick Cup for the next year.

Shanghai has been the victor for the past five years and the Hongkong team is expected to put up a hard fight in an effort to regain possession of the much-coveted cup.

The veteran Shanghai team is in fine shape, having been whipped into form by McMichael the seasoned and hard-hitting captain, who has worked extremely hard in coaching their team-work.

The customary preparations have been made to take care of the large crowds who usually attend the event which is regarded as the most brilliant of the summer season.

The line-up of the opposing teams will be as follows:

Shanghai	Hongkong
Newbigging No. 1	Davies
McMichael (Capt.) No. 2	Palmer
Boyd No. 3	Neville (capt.).
Robinson No. 4	Judd.

SHANGHAI DEFEAT HANKOW IN INTERPORT LAWN BOWLS

Easy Win For Local Team Over Visitors; 33 Shots To 13

In the second interport lawn bowls match yesterday the Shanghai team defeated the Hankow quartette by the big score of 33 to 13. There was a fair crowd, partly called out by the good playing on Wednesday afternoon, when the local team met Hongkong. Yesterday's bowling was rather below standard though D. McAllister and G. McMurdo scored well.

Hankow scored on the first end, but Shanghai got five shots on the second, making the score 6—1, and maintained their lead to the finish. (After the completion of the thirteenth end, when the score stood 20 to 11 in favor of the local team, the visitors failed to score until the nineteenth, when they scored one shot, and added another in the next end. Shanghai continued to roll up shots, and finished with 33 to the visitors' 13.

For the Hankow team: Skip Crosby bowled well, and his clever work netted several shots.

The teams yesterday were as follows:

Shanghai:—G. McMurdo (skip), Young, McAllister, and Porter.

Hankow: W. Crosby (skip), Godwin, Boyling, and Owen.

HONGKONG-HANKOW TODAY

This afternoon the Hongkong lawn bowls team is to meet the Hankow players on the grounds of the Shanghai Lawn Bowls Club. Tomorrow Hankow is to play the Junior Golf Club.

Further arrangements are as follows:

Sept. 8, Hongkong vs. Junior Golf Club.

Sept. 8, Hankow vs. Yangtszepoo L. B. C.

Sept. 9, Hongkong vs. S. R. C.

Sept. 9, Hankow vs. S. L. B. C.

Sept. 10, Hongkong vs. S. L. B. C.

TWO BALL GAMES SCHEDULED FOR THIS WEEK-END

Shanghai Team To Meet All-Navy Men Today

Shanghai is to meet the All-Navy baseball team this afternoon at the Recreation Grounds. The game is due to start at 3:30 p.m., and an excellent contest is expected. This and Sunday's game will be the last on these grounds this year.

Sunday the Gallopers will meet the Japanese Union team. If this team is anything like their brothers of Keio and the M. B. K. here we will see a first-class exhibition, and chances are even as to the winners. The game will start at 4 p.m.

Flood Relief Drive Is Formally Launched By Red Cross At Peking

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, Sept. 1.—The National flood relief drive, which is being organized under the joint auspices of the China International Famine Relief Commission and the Chinese National Red Cross Society, was formally inaugurated at a function, attended by a representative gathering of foreigners and Chinese, held at the Red Cross Society's headquarters in Kan Min Hutung this afternoon.

Opening the proceedings with a brief speech, Dr. W. W. Yen, who presided, thanked the visitors for their attendance—an act, he said, which proved in itself that they took a sympathetic interest in the work on hand. Some half a dozen provinces, he pointed out, were involved in the floods and perhaps 30 million people were rendered homeless and otherwise left without means of existing. On the part of the Government efforts were being made to render organized relief and, following precedents, it was expected to levy surtaxes of various sorts to raise the necessary funds. The Red Cross Society of China and the International Famine Relief Commission had combined to make a "drive" with the object of raising two million dollars. It was not proposed, Dr. Yen explained, to secure the entire sum in Peking but various sums would be allotted to the larger cities and their compatriots abroad were expected to contribute liberally. They all knew, he said, that times were hard and this was not the first time that help of this kind had been asked for. Some efforts, however, must be made to save the starving and homeless millions and to undertake measures which would at least partly prevent the recurrence of similar disasters. "I wish to assure all who are present," concluded Dr. Yen, "that the money obtained will be spent in the wisest and most economical manner, and that every cent of it will be used for relief work, present and future."

Dr. Yen then called upon Mr. Kao Ling-wei, who stepped forward and read a message from the President of the Republic commending the work of the Societies and urging whole-hearted support of their latest effort.

A speech in Chinese by Mgr. Fabragues, on behalf of the French community, was followed by one in English by Mr. Hardy Jowett, who expressed the British community's sympathy with the project.

Taking a proverb of Mencius for his text, Mr. Hardy Jowett appealed to his hearers to demonstrate, by their interest in this movement, that humanity is common to all men and knows no bounds. Short addresses on relief work were given by a Chinese gentleman and Mr. W. H. Mallory, Executive Secretary of the China International Famine Relief Commission. The latter explained just how it was proposed to administer the funds raised, and gave a brief outline of the Commission's policy of labor relief and flood prevention works. General Banzai spoke for the Japanese community and the last speaker was a representative of the Acting Premier (Dr. Wellington Koo), who explained that his Chief, though unavoidably prevented from attending the function, none the less sympathised warmly with its object.

At the end of the proceedings, during which it was announced that the President had contributed $10,000 and the Pope 100,000 lira for flood relief purposes, the gathering adjourned to another part of the Red Cross premises for tea.

AUSTRALIANS WIN AND LOSE IN DAVIS PLAY

Patterson Beaten By LaCoste But O'Hara Wood Beats Borotra

(Reuter's American Service)

Boston, Sept. 4.—O'Hara Wood (Australia) beat Borotra (France) in the second singles match today of the Davis Cup final. The score was: 1-6, 6-4, 1-6, 6-4, 6-2.

(Reuter's American Service)

Boston, Sept. 4.—In the first match in the final round of the Davis Cup competition, Lacoste (France) defeated Patterson (Australia) 6-3, 6-2, 10-8.

Lacoste's youth and steadiness accounted for his very unexpected defeat of Patterson, who in the third set put up a spirited fight. Lacoste, who was most tenacious, played a back-court game and concentrated on the Australian's backhand.

Home Cricket

(Reuter's Service)

Hastings, Sept. 4.—The match between the South Africans and the South of England was resumed today in dull weather. The wicket was wet.

The South of England declared on their overnight score of 312 for 9. Nourse took 3 for 55 and Pegler 3 for 69.

The Africans made 269, Ward contributing 68 and Nourse 69. Woolley took 4 for 66 and Robert Relf 4 for 24.

Scores: South of England 312, South Africans 269.

Anti-Communist Revolt Of Labor Is Shown In Speeches At Union Meet

Foreign Delegates Address Congress At Hull; American Labor Representative Unable To Participate In International Federation

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 4.—The anti-Communist revolt of labor, exemplified in the speeches and resolutions at the Trade Union Congress, is further illustrated by a decision of the Executive of the Labor party at the meeting at Hull that members of the Communist Party may be accepted as delegates to the Conference but cannot be endorsd as Labor candidates.

Mr. Pollitt, a boiler maker and one of the Communists affected by this decision, interviewed, said that it would compel many Trade Unions to consider their relationship towards the Labor Party, but he was confident that the Labor Conference would reject this decision.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 4.—The foreign delegates today addressed the Trade Union Congress at Hull.

Mr. Brady, of the American Federation of Labor, said that they believed in international kinship because Trade Unions were the only substantial bulwarks against despotisms like Kaiserism and Bolshevism, but it was impossible for the American Federation of Labor to participate in the International Federation of Trade Unions, which, by a vote of a few individuals, could commit them to a policy completely at variance with their ideas.

Mr. McClelland (Canada) said that the workers of Canada were troubled over the question of immigration. The gates of Canada were opened wide and 133,000 immigrants had entered last year, but 183,000 had left Canada to find a living in the United States.

M. Tomsky, the Chairman of the All-Russian Council of Trade Unions, said that the labor movement throughout the world was realising the necessity for greater concentration and centralisation to meet the growing internationalisation of capital. The vanquished in the Great War were the workers of the world; the victors were small groups of profiteers in each country. The iron hand of world capitalism was now seizing the starving German proletariat by the throat. The Dawes plan was only a new scheme of exploitation, which would only result in increased trade competition. He said in conclusion, that Russian workers desired to co-operate in the fight against the common enemy, exploitation.

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 4.—The Trade Union Congress has agreed to empower the General Council, through the International Federation of Trades Unions, to take all possible steps to bring together the different elements of the Labor movement in Europe in an effort to establish solidarity making for world peace.

The President said that communications received from France, Italy and Germany were showing that the continental nations were looking for a lead to Britain, where unity was very firmly established. Therefore it seemed incumbent on the British movement to take steps to consummate this desire and thus fulfil its great destiny.

Gens. Ho And Chen, Lincheng Rivals Now Rivals Here

It's a long distance from Lincheng, the little town in Shantung Province made famous by the bandit raid of May, 1923, to the present battle front near Shanghai but there is a connection between the two which is significant. The Chinese military officer who was chiefly held responsible for the Lincheng outrage was General Ho Feng-yu, a brother of General Ho Feng-lin the present commanding general of the Chekiang troops. General Ho Feng-yu at the time of the bandit raid on the Blue Express was defence commissioner at the town of Yenchowfu and it was his alleged negligence in permitting a gang of 2,000 bandits to organise in his district, that probably made the raid possible. After the foreign prisoners had been released by the bandits, General Ho was dropped from the army and came to Shanghai. Now according to report he is assisting his brother here.

And this isn't all of the story. The Chinese military officer, General Chen Tiao-yuan, defence commissioner at Hsuchowfu who was chiefly responsible for the defeat of the bandit gang and thus obtained the release of the foreign prisoners who had been held for many weeks on Paotzuku mountain, is now in charge of the advance forces of Kiangsu troops now storming the Chekiang strongholds at Nanziang and Huangtu a few miles out of Shanghai. Thus do the opponents at Lincheng in 1923 become the opponents of 1923 in the present fight between Kiangsu and Chekiang.

B. W. A. Notes

New Members.—The following new members have joined since the last announcement:

Mrs. C. M. Bain; Mrs. C. E. Collinge; Mrs. Early-Brown; Mrs. Edwin Elliott; Miss E. Heaton-Smith; Mrs. A. P. Hubbard; Mrs. Monet; Miss K. L. Peach; Miss V. Peach; Mrs. John Roxburgh; Mrs. Tipton; Mme. L. Young.

The following have resigned on their departure for England:

Mrs. Prichard; Mrs. Warton.

New Premises.—Members will be glad to learn that the new premises in the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank building will be ready for occupation in about ten days' time though the exact date for moving in has not been settled as yet.

These premises which are delightfully cool and airy consist of a comfortably furnished tea lounge and library in the gallery with a large Committee Room, Kitchen and Dressing Room ensuite. This gallery has access to the roof garden which gives a wonderful view of Shanghai and the river with its shipping, doubly interesting just now on account of the many different war ships riding at anchor along the Bund.

The lower floor contains the office and a fine social Hall with a well equipped stage at one end suitable for concerts, lectures and dramatic entertainments.

The handsome proscenium with heavy velvet curtains has been presented by the Needle Craft Section and the members of the House Committee and the Hon. Treasurer, Mrs. E. T. Byrne, are very grateful indeed for this generous gift.

Thanks are also due to the dramatic section for a contribution towards the cost of the stage, and to the Entertainment Committee for one towards the electrical heating installation.

Children's Fete and Dahlia Show.—The Children's Fete and Dahlia Show will be held (weather permitting) in Mrs. Hayim's beautiful garden in Siccawei Road about the 20th of October next.

Plenty of entertainment has been arranged for the young people including Sports with prizes, lucky dips and a candy store; and besides the Dahlia Show there will be a home product stall and one for "Woolies" to interest the "grown ups."

There will be no admission fee for children and tea will be provided for them free of charge, so it is hoped a large number will come and make a success of what promises to be a very delightful entertainment for the youth of Shanghai.

Russ Refugee Committee Reports On Activities

The Russian Refugee Relief Advisory Committee, through Mr. A. E. Lockyer, its treasurer, has just issued a comprehensive report on the various activities of this branch of the refugee work. In view of the ever-present in this Shanghai problem the report is given in full:

During the month (August) 18669 meals were served at the Soup Kitchen. As our Repatriation funds were rapidly getting exhausted the Stewards of the Shanghai Race Club again came to our assistance with a donation of $5,000 and on behalf of my Committee I wish to thank them most heartily for the encouragement and generous support they always give to our work.

I also wish to thank the Shanghai Tramway Co. for printing another 50,000 meal tickets which are of great help and save us considerable expense.

SCHOOL FUND

In response to the appeal made in the newspapers in connection with the question of removing Russian children from the streets, this account shows a total of $358.70 received to date but much more will be required to keep the school going.

HOUSING AND GENERAL

The funds under this head are rapidly diminishing and unless further assistance is forthcoming we may not be able to keep the Paoting Road shelter going. Twenty destitute families are housed there and as the cause is a very deserving one its is hoped the necessary funds will be found to keep it going.

Part cost of sending 125 Cossacks to Hailar	2317.85/ 11290.44
Balance	$9,686.44

We have still to pay a balance of about $3,000 on the 125 Cossacks sent to Hailar. It will be noticed that the first batch of refugees sent away cost very much more than the other batches and this is explained by the fact that they went in winter and that we have since been able to obtain a very material reduction in rates.

Repatriation in summer is very much cheaper as double the number can be accomodated in one truck and for this reason it is advisable to get as many refugees as possible away before the winter sets in.

MORE THAN 200 WOUNDED CARED FOR IN HOSPITALS

Injured Brought To Shanghai And Woosung For Treatment

According to Dr. Way-sung New, head of the Chinese Red Cross 100 wounded soldiers and civilians from the Liuho front were brought in motor cars to the Red Cross Rospital on Avenue Haig yesterday afternoon and last night. This makes 120 wounded in this hospital and in the Emergency Hospital on Tientsin Road. Arrangements are now being made to use the Colera Hospital on Thibet Road for further cases coming in today.

In addition to this, Dr. New was called to Woosung late yesterday afternoon for consulatation at the military hospital there where eleven serious cases requiring operations had been collected from the Nanziang front. These wounded were finally brought to Shanghai where operations consisting of amputations and adbominal injuries were attended to. According to Dr. New there were yesterday about fifty wounded in the Woosung Hospital.

Menace To Cable Landing Ended As Battery Is Moved

It was reported late last night that the Chinese forces in control at Woosung had removed a battery of five guns which had been established earlier in the week in the vicinity of Paoshan in close proximity to the cable landing. All three of the cables connecting Shanghai with the outside world, the Commercial Pacific, the Great Northern and the Eastern Extension have their landing station in the same compound at Woosung and it was feared by the foreign naval authorities in case the Chinese navy attempted to fire on the battery that a stray shot might put the cables out of commission.

The Chintse battery was established in this position for the purpose of commanding the river and preventing the Kiangsu naval force from entering the Shanghai harbor to attack the arsenal at Lungwa. Soon after establishing the battery however the Chinese military authorities realised the possible danger to the cables and it was reported last night that the battery had been removed to a position to command the entrance to the river.

MacDonald Denies Sudan Interview

(Reuter's Service)

Geneva, Sept. 4.—At a reception to pressmen here today, Mr. Ramsay MacDonald emphatically repudiated his alleged interview with reference to Egypt, in which he was stated to have declared that Zaghlul Pasha had ignored his last invitation to come to London and that he he was convinced that the recent disturbances in the Sudan had been engineered by members of the Egyptian Government.

Portuguese Flyers Given Enthusiastic Welcome In London

(Reuter's Service)

London, Sept. 4.—An enthusiastic welcome was accorded to Major Britto Paes and his companions on the Lisbon-Macao flight at a dinner given in their honor by the Portuguese Chamber of Commerce in London. The Portuguese Ambassador and other speakers paid a tribute to the achievement of the airmen, who are on their way home, as equalling the old traditions of Portuguese navigators.

NEGOTIATIONS CARRIED ON AS TROOPS BATTLE

Nanking And Chekiang Officials Hold Meeting Here, Report

While the armies of Kiangsu and Chekiang were battling back and forth on the Liuho-Huangtu front yesterday, two high officials of the contesting parties were reported to have been in conference nearly all day yesterday in Shanghai trying to discover a basis of compromise. Just what the result of the conference was no one was in a position at a late hour last night to say, but it is known that the Nanking official left by boat last night with his report for presentation to General Chi.

It will require him at least fifty hours to reach Nanking by fastest boat so it will be several days before the results of the conference are known. The Nanking official arrived in Shanghai on Wednesday of this week and put up at one of the foreign hotels and within a few hours was reported to have gotten in touch with responsible agents of Chekiang for a general discussion of the situation.

Kiangsi Famine Committee Asks For $500,000

According to a report received here today from the China International Famine Relief Commission, Peking, the Kiangsi International Famine Relief Committee has made a request for $500,000 in addition to $100,000, which it has already secured, for flood relief in Kiangsi province, which was one of the hardest hit by the recent floods. The relief will be in the form of advances of seed rice on a loan basis and rebuilding of the destroyed dykes, the program being arranged on the basis of the report of Mr. O. J. Todd, engineer of the Commission, who is now in Nanchang making a thorough investigation of the conditions.

40 Georgian Rebels Given Death Penalty By Soviet Tribunal

(Reuter's Service)

Moscow, Sept. 5.—Forty leaders of the recent Georgian rising have been condemned to death and will immediately be shot. Their names have not been divulged but it is believed that they include Prince Andronnikov, the leader of the Georgian anti-Bolshevists.

Airplanes Sighted At Bubbling Well

Settlement police officers at Bubbling Well Station sighted two airplanes at 6.15 o'clock yesterday morning. The planes were apparently en route from the Arsenal, and after passing over the Western district headed down the railway track toward the front at Huangtu.

Missionary Flees From Battle Zone On Wheelbarrow

Arrives In Shanghai After 15 Mile Journey From Nanziang

After several hours of rough travelling on a wheelbarrow Miss A. G. Waters, an American Methodist missionary stationed at Nanziang, arrived safely in Shanghai yesterday afternoon together with several Chinese members of the mission staff.

Miss Waters reported that fierce fighting was taking place right outside of Nanziang and that the place was being torn up by the soldiers who were also destroying the rice crops by draining the paddies and levelling off the field in an apparent effort to make a landing field for aeroplanes. The people fleeing from the danger zone, according to Miss Waters, were experiencing great difficulty in obtaining means of transportation, and nothing but the wheelbarrows were to be had and even those were to be obtained only by special permission.

Miss Waters was forced to make the trip from Nanziang by wheelbarrow.

U.S. Tourists Will Spend $300,000,000 Abroad

Visitors To Europe This Year Likely To Break All Records For Outlay: 300,000 Engage Passage

American tourists will spend in Europe this year not less than $300,000,000, which does not include the millions that will be left there by men and women who are mixing business with the pleasure of touring. The rush of travel to date has far exceeded last year's and it was said recently in New York by bankers and others catering to the tourist traffic that a record probably would be established in point of wealth carried by nationals out of America for any one year.

Three hundred thousand tourists are said to have arranged for European trips this year, and inquiries have indicated that the Winter season will show a heavy flow of American capital to foreign countries.

The export of capital in this way has attracted the United States Government's attention. Representatives of various departments have visited New York banks to try to get a line on it. No concern is felt, but rather the contrary. The movement is of sufficient volume to alleviate the condition the United States is experiencing in having more gold than it needs. Estimates advanced to Government representatives have varied to such an extent that they are still in the dark.

Conversion of American dollars into foreign currencies to meet tourist requirements has been done almost wholly abroad. Travelers' checks made out by the American Express Company, which does the bulk of this work, have the amount printed in dollars. These checks are cashed for sterling, francs, lire, guilders, marks or whatever other currency may be wanted. So well acquainted has the average foreigner become with the dollar that even peasants are eager to make change for American tourists, and frequently are able to quote the latest dollar foreign exchange values.

A result of this conversion process has been seen in the recent advance of the foreign exchange bills of those countries most popular with tourists. The pound sterling has risen sharply during a period when normally it declines.

The following table showing the prices in dollars of some of the principal European bills on Jan. 2, on July 1, when tourist buying started on large proportions, and at yesterday's close throws light on the movement:

Currency.	Jan. 2.	July 1.	Yesterday.
Sterling	$4.27¼	$4.32¾	$4.39⅞
French francs	5.01½	5.14	5.07¼
Belgian francs	4.38½	4.53	4.59
Swiss francs	17.36	17.77	18.43½
Lire	4.30	4.30¼	4.33

The purest reflection of tourist buying was said to be evidenced in the Swiss franc, the quotation on which was influenced largely by American spending in Switzerland. In the case of the pound sterling there were added to the tourist stimulous other influences, such as the recent movement of money for loaning purposes from the New York to the London Market. The French franc has fluctuated so rapidly as a result of the $100,000,000 franc stablization credit and of international political developments that a full measure of tourist influence was not available, but both in the lira and the Belgian franc this influence had free play.

France and Switzerland normally would divide the greater part of tourist money, according to H. K. Brooks, Vice President of the American Express Company, who explained, however, that most American tourists in Europe stopped off in England en route. In 1923 the business done by the company on purely tourist business was $125,000,000 and this year it is believed the figure will run to $140,000,000 of which amounts approximately 40 percent or $50,000,000 and $56,000,000 respectively, will represent the money actually left in Europe by American tourists, their passage having been paid for in dollars prior to departure.

A curious change in the character of foreign travel was indicated in the experience of this year by the Raymond & Whitcomb tours and Cook tours. An officer of the Raymond & Whitcomb Company said the "old line" tourist has forsaken the faster ships for the slower "one-class" ships, having been crowded out by the rush of newly rich Americans. Virtually all classes of vessels accordingly are reporting good tourist business.

The amounts spent abroad by American tourists were said to vary from $500 or thereabouts to well into the thousands and in some cases, into the tens of thousands. It was believed by bankers and shipping men that the average figure would be around $1,000.

'PITTSBURGH PLUS' IS DISCUSSED BY JUDGE E. H. GARY

Steel Corporation Will Be Guided By Legal Department

New York, July 30.—A meeting of the Presidents of the various subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation was held in the office of Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of directors, yesterday, to discuss the decision of the Federal Trade Commission in ordering the company to abolish the Pittsburgh basing practice, which the commission held to be an unfair method of selling steel products. It is assumed in financial and trade circles that inasmuch as the "Pittsburgh plus" practice is virtually no longer practiced in the steel trade to any great extent, the Steel Corporation will inform the Trade Commission to this effect and readjust its entire selling program to the system applied in other industries.

No decision was reached at yesterday's meeting and an adjournment was taken until Aug. 19. Commenting upon the meeting Judge Gary said: "We spent considerable time in discussion and finally, in order to proceed with caution and to reach a sound and satisfactory and reasonable conclusion, we adjourned to meet again three weeks from today. At the meeting I spoke briefly to the President and my remarks have been written up. They are brief, but intended to be clear."

Judge Gary, in his statement to the Presidents of the subsidiary companies of the United States Steel Corporation, said:

"Today we are to especially consider the rights of the consumer and our duty and obligation toward him. While this question is a business one, still it must be determined in accordance with the principles I have adverted to, of course, including the rules of legal procedure and precedent.

TO BE GUIDED BY LEGAL ADVICE

"As to all legal questions, we must depend upon and strictly follow the advice of our legal department. As to questions of ethics and policies we must decide for ourselves, but not so as to conflict with the rules of law. In the problems particularly presented at this meeting I think there may be involved both legal questions and others that might be differently classified.

"As you know, the Chairman at the outset personally urged the Federal Trade Commission to take jurisdiction of the Pittsburgh base matters. It was, however, on condition that all the independent iron and steel manufacturers and officials of different cities and other localities interested should be made parties to the proceedings. Jurisdiction was assumed, but the conditions were ignored; this decision as made, I think, was unjust in failing to adopt the condition. However, we have nothing to do with that at this time.

"As to whether or not the finding of the Federal Trade Commission is reasonable or sound or supported by the law or evidence applicable, or should be tested by further action, we are not now concerned. Our general counsel will advise us in regard to those questions. Meanwhile we must cheerfully and in good faith adopt and apply the directions of the Federal Trade Commission as announced.

"As I see it, there are two questions for us to discuss today. The first is, What must or can we do to come strictly within the meaning of the decision? and the second is, What ought we to do, regardless of the decision, in justice to all concerned? It seems to me the second question is of the first and highest consideration. Our practice in business has been intended to be in accordance with this view.

"It is an acknowledged rule that the fair market value of property is the price at which a proposed seller, not compelled to sell, is willing to take, and the proposed buyer, not compelled to buy, is willing to pay. This rule is modified by the doctrine that the public interest, under general rules well established, or statutory regulatory enactments, may compel private interests to subordinate their rights. The application of these rules is for our legal department to determine when they are called upon.

"It would seem obvious to us as laymen that a manufacturer at Pittsburgh could not nor should be compelled to sell his product at Chicago for the same price he receives at Pittsburgh, because the additional cost to him is the amount of transporattion he has to pay from Pittsburgh to Chicago.

THE QUESTION OF FAIRNESS

"But if the Pittsburgh producer has also a manufacturing plant in Chicago and the cost of production is not larger there, and the capacity is sufficient to supply from that point, then a different question is presented, and it is a very difficult one for one who desires to be fair under all circumstances. There are many things to consider. The Chicago manufacturer has customers located throughout the country who have no local mills and must go to Chicago for their supplies. They are in competition with purchasers utilising their purchased commodities at or near Chicago and have no freight to pay. They ought to be protected in some way.

"Without attempting to discuss or even raise just now the many perplexing questions involved, it would seem that if practicable the basing point at Pittsburgh should be used, as it has always been intended, simply as a guide or a means of fixing in each case a market price which should enable not only the seller but also the buyer to know and act upon a basis for calculation. This has been and probably will always be the custom throughout world as to all kinds and classes of commodities, except as supervised by some public agency.

"The inexorable law of supply and demand must always finally determine what shall be the selling price of what is sold if and so long as there is a natural, free and uninterrupted commerce. Any country which unnecessarily interferes with this will retrograde and fail of reasonable success.

"So far as we are concerned there never should be any reason for governmental action to compel us to do what is right. In all respects, concerning all interests, we should act fairly, justly and liberally up to the full limits of propriety.

"Bearing these remarks in mind giving them such attention as they deserve, let us freely discuss and deliberately consider the questions of the hour."

China Cotton

Messrs. A. B. Rosenfeld and Son, Inc., state in their report:

We have had another dull week in the cotton market, with business almost suspended on account of the militaristic squabble between Chekiang and Kiangsu provinces, and the market presenting, for the greater part, an uncertain appearance, with alternative spells of weakness and strength. Professional operators in the Exchange show little decided opinion to operate on either side of the market, and are assuming a waiting attitude.

Regarding the Kiangsu and Chekiang crop outlook, the bulk of advices that have come in reports have been very favorable and a bumper yield is looked forward to. Recent reports from Chili province indicate that crop conditions in the southern districts are more favorable and the crop being estimated to be 60% and over. In Shantung province, it is reported that worms are prevalent, due to the dryness of the weather.

In the circumstances, the outlook for price changes in the future cannot be easily defined and conservatism should, therefore, be the keynote of any operations entered into at the present time.

Receipts about 4,000 bales (about 2,400 piculs) of new season's cotton have arrived from Chekiang province and most of which was bought up for export to Canton, Swatow and Japan at Tls. 44.60 to Tls. 45.00 per picul, ex warehouse.

Hankow Trade

The British Chamber of Commerce, Hankow, states in its weekly circular of trade statistics under date August 27:

There has been more general enquiry denoting a better undertone. Actual business, however, continues on a small scale. Hides are in better demand. There was quite considerable activity in wood oil and a fair quantity changed hands at daily advancing prices. This article is in good demand from Europe. Some business was also reported in beans and Chinagrass. Business of a small order is recorded in sesamum seed, which article has a tendency to harden in price. Antimony is sought after, but stocks here are inconsiderable and firmly held at prices above home parties. Bristles are feeling their way to a stable basis and prospects of business are not unfavorable.

EXPORTS

Bar silver opened the week at 34⅞ ready and forward declined to 34⅛ and closed at 34⅛ ready and forward. New York-London cross rate commenced at 448⅞ and with slight fluctuations closed at the same rate. T.T. at 3/3⅝ declined to 3/3⅛ on 23rd instant and closed at 3/3⅜ with a firm tendency. 4 m/credits done at 3/4⅛ on 21st instant declined to 3/4⅜ and finished week at 3/4⅜ August/September, 3/4⅛ October and 3/4⅞ November/December. Chinese market rates: Shanghai Tls. 98.5. Local currency $68.1. Native interest 18%.

IMPORTS

Piece Goods:—A certain amount of forward business is reported due to the fall in the price of cotton.

Yarn:—Market quiet and prices easier.

BLACK TEA

Purchasing has continued on the same lines as in the previous week, with the result that all the better Oualas are cleared off the market.

The consequence of this is that prices for the low medium teas, which now become the best teas available, have advanced Tls. 2.

Considerable quantities of second crop teas have been put on the market, and the figure is rapidly approaching the 60,000 H/C, which was first estimated; in fact, it seems probable that this figure will be exceeded. The teas are, in the main, just as poor proportionately as the first crop teas, so that they cannot be considered attractive.

There is still no evidence of any interest being displayed in regard to common and commonest grades, the prices asked being too much out of proportion with the value.

Sandy Macdonald
SCOTCH WHISKY
The men of the "eighties" were good judges of whisky. They favoured Sandy Macdonald so strongly that its success was conspicuous. But the men of to-day are even better judges, for they favour Sandy Macdonald more than ever. Sandy Macdonald is mellow, mature, soft and satisfying—a drink to appreciate.

What Peking And Canton Think Of The Kiangsu-Chekiang War

THE Peking Daily News, Chinese edited paper published in the English language in the Capital and and popularly supposed to reflect the views of President Tsao Kun, in its issue of September 1 still thought at that time that the war might be averted if Chekiang Province would disband the "rebel" troops from Fukien Province which had entered Chekiang from the south and which action precipitated the present struggle. After referring to the peace pact which the Chinese Chamber of Commerce in Shanghai forced Generals Chi and Lu to sign just a year ago, the Peking paper states most emphatically that when General Lu permitted the Fukien troops to enter his province that this constituted a breach of the so-called peace pact. Says the editor of this paper. "In ordinary international dealings, it is considered a hostile act if one country takes in the defeated armies of another and incorporates such forces into its national army. So in the same way the act of Chekiang in incorporating the defeated Fukien troops into its army is considered by Kiangsu a hostile act. The best way of dispelling the rumors is for Chekiang to disband the defeated Fukien troops."

However in view of the fact that General Lu has placed these very Fukien troops in the front lines and they are now engaged in fighting General Chi's forces on the outskirts of Shanghai there is little hope of disbandment now. Continuing this paper says, "Whatever the dispute the military leaders may have, the people are strongly for peace. The Government, represented by President Tsao Kun and Dr. Wellington Koo and the Cabinet would do everything to avoid hostilities. In fact the President a few days ago wired to Kiangsu and Chekiang in the interest of peace. . . . Of all times China needs peace now. A greater part of the country is at present in the grip of one of the greatest disasters of flood, and financial conditions are turned upside down as result of the breakdown of the stock-exchanges. Money is very tight. Business is facing the hardest time. Hostilities will strike the commerce of the country a blow from which it will take years to recover, as it will strike at the greatest commercial center of the country—Shanghai and the surrounding cities. It is strongly hoped that the appalling effect of war will at last be realised by Chekiang so that it may finally be decided to stand honorably by its solemn pledge."

Canton of course has its own war troubles aplenty, but the Canton Gazette, official organ of Dr. Sun's headquarters finds time to comment on the Shanghai war situation. "Is Wu Pei-fu manipulating the thing behind the scenes?" asks this paper and then continues. "We are inclined to think that he is because he has good reason to dislike Lu Yung-hsiang and seems to be willing to pay a large price for General Lu's eradication. For the sake of the people we do not wish to see warfare started but it seems that it is inevitable. If so, let it come off and be through with it as quickly as possible."

Another paper in the South, the Hongkong Telegraph is reminded of the fact it was only a few months ago that Sir Robert Ho Tung started his scheme for a "round-table" conference looking toward the unification of China. "Great hopes were entertained of the Round Table scheme thought out by Sir Robert Hotung, and all the leaders in North and South agreed that it was a splendid idea and had their hearty approval. We can judge from recent events how much sincerity there was in those utterances. Apparently it was a case of reserving the right to disagree with anybody who did not fall in with one's own views. Had these leaders met we wonder how far the discussion would have got toward a settlement. Even while Sir Robert Ho Tung was sounding the heads of the factions, they must have been planning their present campaigns, and intriguing for the position of dictators rather than negotiators. With flood and threatened famine burdening the people, there now comes the clash of contending forces, in the North and the rattle of arms and a threatened conflagration of great magnitude in the South. Meanwhile finances are in a parlous state, the law of the land, such as it is, is being successfully ignored, there are intrigues with outsiders and rebuffs of other nations, which make the foreign 'policy' of the country more complicated than ever, and the chances of chaos seem nearer. Truly, China's sorrows are never at an end."

A Land Of Paradoxes

WHEN Dr. W. W. Yen, on September 1, formally inaugurated in Peking the national flood relief drive organised under the joint auspices of the China International Famine Relief Commission and the Chinese National Red Cross Society, in the presence of a representative gathering of foreigners and Chinese, it probably did not come within his philosophy that two days later there would be fratricidal strife between Kiangsu and Chekiang Provinces. The incongruous spectacle, therefore, is presented to the world's astonished gaze that while an appeal is made for donations to the tune of ten million dollars for affording succor to the famine-stricken districts of the country, China's militarists have embarked upon a war that is going to cost the nation many, many times the amount for which the appeal has been made. It is a sad commentary on the situation in this country, and, like Hamlet, one may well exclaim: "The world is out of joint."

The incidence of the war, of course, will make no difference to those foreigners who are disposed to loosen their purse-strings on behalf of those who have been overtaken by a cruel fate. They have readily done so many times in the past and will do so in the future. The majority of foreigners always take a sympathetic interest in anything tending to ameliorate the hard lot of the patient, toiling masses in China. But we fear that the hostilities now in progress will militate in no uncertain manner against the work of affording relief. Some half a dozen provinces are involved in the floods and it is estimated that no fewer than thirty million people are rendered homeless and otherwise left without means of existing. But there can be no organised relief with the interruption that has set in in the matter of communications. Relief supplies cannot be properly transported from place to place on railway lines subjected to the tender mercies of rival armies. Thus do the people suffer by the creation of turmoil and disorder.

Then there is the moral aspect of the question which should not be disregarded. At the inaugural ceremony in Peking, Dr. Yen assured his audience that the money obtained as a result of the drive would be spent in the wisest and most economical manner, and that every cent of it would be used for relief work present and future. While we have absolute faith in the integrity of Dr. Yen, who is reputed to be one of the most enlightened Chinese in the country today, we must not overlook forces that are beyond his control. The temptation on the part of warring troops to seize funds or supplies intended for the needy is not to be minimised, and if those who have lent their support to the relief drive perchance discover that the response to their appeal is not as great as they perhaps expect, the reason is to be found not in an unwillingness to assist a good cause but rather in a natural fear that funds and supplies might not reach the right quarter. It is unfortunate for the victims of flood and famine that the drive should have been started at a time which cannot be considered propitious for ultimate success. And not the least ironical aspect of the whole sorry business is that a mere tithe of the money frittered away in needless fighting would have been sufficient to afford succor to the famine-stricken victims without the aid of foreign donations. The incongruity of it is depressing.

USE AND BEAUTY

The Sabbath, said the Teacher, was made for Man, and not Man for the Sabbath.

The bearin's of which, as Dickens would say, is in its application.

Any Institution was made for Man, and not Man for the Institution.

The college, for instance. No, friend Procrustes, whilst we appreciate your zeal to make a record for yourself as President, yet we would remind you that we are sending our boy to your University for the good He can get out of it, and not for the benefit He can be to it. He is not there for you to find out how far He falls short of your standards, nor what glory He can add to his Alma Mater; He is there for You to find out what's in Him, and to develop that. We don't care a hang about your grand old traditions and things, except as they help you in being the making of our particular pup.

The Church was made for Man, and not Man for the Church. And if your meeting-house is just occupied in keeping itself up, parson, why, close it up and start a hennery. We don't care about how much money you raise, nor how beautiful are your vestments, nor how high your theology, nor how numerous your membership, nor how gay your stained glass. Are you helping friend Man? Are you making him sober, industrious, clean, and honest? Are you developing in him a civic conscience? Or are you simply being good—so good you're good for nothing? Come, produce! Or quit!

The House was made for Man, Ma, and not Man for the House.

Let the boys play marbles in the dining-room, and the girls have their beaux in the parlor, and grandpa smoke his pipe in the kitchen, and everybody raid the ice-box at 11 p.m. if they want to; that children's knees should wear them out a-gleemaking, and what are sofas for if not for spooning, and kitchen-warmth and cheer if not for old folk homing? Use the old home up, and get a better product—of love and laughter and undying memories.

Books were made for Man, and not Man for Books. Use 'em. Thumb 'em. Mark 'em. Go to bed with 'em. Carry 'em on trains. And don't own books that cannot be carried down through the Valley of Every-day as the soul's lunch-basket.

The most perfect Ornament is that which is of the most perfect Service to Man. No cane is so beautiful as the one grandfather wore smooth on a thousand walks; no chair so lovely as that one mother consecrated by many a night of rocking the baby; no table so priceless as that one where father used to write; no pipe so pretty as the one he smoked; no dress so charming as that one that still has the wrinkless in it worn there by the little girl—gone forever into heaven, or womanhood.

It's the human touch that beautifies. Nothing can be warmly beautiful that is not, or was not, useful.

And Democracy is beautiful because it exists for the welfare of the People that compose it, and not for the glory of the Dynasty that rules it.

The State was made for Man, and not Man for the State.

How The Kiangsu-Chekiang Situation Stands Today!

The Kiangsu-Chekiang war started officially at 10:15 o'clock last Wednesday morning when the first shots were exchanged between the outposts in the vicinity of Huangtu, a little town north of Shanghai on the Shanghai-Nanking Railway. The real beginning of the war was several months ago when a local constabulary officer loyal to Nanking was shot and killed on the borders of the French Concession of Shanghai and a man loyal to Chekiang was appointed in his place. Or if we want to go still farther back the war had its beginning when Chekiang Province declared its independence of the Peking Government and General Chi Hsieh-yuan at Nanking developed an overwhelming desire to bring Shanghai and the surrounding territory under the jurisdiction of Nanking. A lot has been said about this being a fight between Chihli Party and Anfu—and in a sense it is true for General Lu is an old Anfu official—but the real reason for the fight is that General Lu of Chekiang controls the rich Shanghai district and the arsenal here and General Chi has a very great desire to possess himself of these things.

So much for the setting!

As stated above the war has now been in progress for about three days and although many have been killed on each side, the Chekiang troops apparently are holding their own and according to reports last evening have advanced and consolidated their positions. This means that Kiangsu has not been successful in accordance with the announced plans for a "short, sharp fight." General Chi Hsieh-yuan's side was quoted by the political correspondent of the senior morning paper in Shanghai on Saturday last, "They expect to attain their objective in a short war, perhaps without disturbing to any great extent the city of Shanghai which they hope to win back to Kiangsu Province. They have massed approximately 20,000 troops at Quinsan and it is known that they have moved altogether 35,000 men. If these figures are correct it means that they have in close proximity to General Lu Yung-hsiang, a force as large as Lu's entire army."

There was a good deal more to the interview or propaganda whichever way you want to look at it, but everything pointed to the fact that Kiangsu believed or was led to believe that Lu could be licked in a few hours and Shanghai could be brought back to the fold. Only a foolish person would venture to make predictions at this stage of the game but everything now points to a long war. If Chekiang can hold out for a few days, this may enable General Chang Tso-lin to get into the fight and "get a bit of his own back" as one of the North China papers recently expressed it. The news dispatches from both Peking and Mukden of yesterday indicated that General Chang is mobilising. If this is true and General Chang is in earnest, it means a long war all the way from the Great Wall to the Yangtsze Valley. It is hard to unravel the situation in the South or to separate truth from propaganda, but there have been persistent reports that General Chen Chiung-ming has been won over to the Anfu side and may attack Fukien from the South. If this is true it makes the situation for Chihli much more dangerous than if Sun Yat-sen was taking the lead. Dr. Sun's northern expeditions have never materialised further than the newspaper pages owing largely to the fact that he can't cooperate with anybody. He must be the whole show or none.

Thus the situation is something like this: Had General Chi been able to capture Shanghai in a "short, sharp war" as he expected this would have simplified the China political situation for with Shanghai in the control of Chihli, Chekiang would have become a negligible quantity. But after three days of some real fighting Chekiang refuses to be routed and now General Lu's propagandists appear to be more confident than ever that they can hold out until General Chang can come to the rescue. Therefore as things stand now—they may change before these lines appear in print—but just now the war doesn't look like a "short, sharp struggle." It looks more like a general conflagration that may drag out for a considerable period. This however is only a guess based on the showing after the first brush, and one man's guess is as good as another's!

More Truth Than Poetry

BY S. E. KISER

When Henry Diogoues rolled
His tub through the byways of Greece
Short-change tricks were probably old,
And the wolf may have worn a lamb's fleece;
The Hick in those days was not known
By that brief and significant name
But his headpiece consisted of bone,
And he fell for the shell-worker's game.

At the time when the Romans began
The reduction of Carthage to scrap
The plausible confidence man
Was after the simp and the sap;
His methods were probably rough,
They may have been childish, indeed,
But there doubtless were suckers enough
To enable the crooks to succeed.

In the days when the witches were burned
The sharpers were gouging the chumps;
Hard lessons were painfully learned
By boys who went over the bumps;
The tricksters were up to their tricks
When Boston consisted of huts;
There is never a shortage of Hicks,
And never a famine of nuts.

Start any old game anywhere,
No matter how crude or absurd;
Sell heaven at five cents a share
For the common and ten for the preferred;
It will go, if you're good at a bluff
And are glib and have innocent looks,
For there always are suckers enough
To make it darned soft for the crooks.

Who Are The Survivors Of Prehistory?

BY GARRETT P. SERVISS,

The archaeologists who uncovered the wonderful rema ns of prehistory in the Vezere Valley in France have added to their discoveries a theory hardly less interesting than the astonishing facts on which it is based.

Naturally, when we find unmistakable remains of races of men who flourished and disappeared ages before what we call real history began, our curiosity is excited as to what can have become of them. Were they wiped out of existence, like the huge beasts of the time of the dinosaurs, or are their lineal descendants still living unrecognised upon the earth?

It will be remembered by those who read what I recently wrote here about the discoveries at and around Les Eyzies in the Vezere Valley, that in the later prehistoric stages two remarkable races succeeded one another, the first being the Cro-Magnons of the Aurignacian race and the next the Magdaleneans. Both were notable for the possession of artistic abiltiy and skill that excite no less admiration than surprise. These races were related but not identical.

Skeletons of men of the Magdalenean race show that they were of short stature (about 5 feet tall), with long, high heads, of a cranial capacity (brain room) excelling that of the average modern man; long, broad faces and prominent chins. In profile their heads and faces represent, according to Dr. Testut, "all the characters belonging to superior races."

The same authority points out the striking resemblances between the skeletons of these ancient Magdaleneans and those of the Esquimaux of Labrador and Greenland. In both "the skull is high, the sagittal crest projecting, the face at the same time very large and long, and the eye-orbits nearly round. We know, moreover, that the Esquimaux have large heads and are of small stature."

To this Professor Capitan, and Curator Peyrony of the Les Eyzies Museum, add: "The manners, the tools, and the artistic attempts of these Hyperboreans (the Esquimaux) furnish an ensemble of facts favoring their relationship with the troglodites of La Madeleine"—a cavern in the Vezere Valley whose name has been given to the Magdalenean race. And they continue: "This is corroborated by the traces left by them on the route of their migration toward the north."

But, curiously enough, it appears that the two related races of the Cro-Magnons and the Magdaleneans migrated from the Les Eyzies in opposite directions, for the same writers say: "The latest direct descendants of the Cro-Magnons appear to be confined to South Africa (the Bushmen), while those of the Magdaleneans, together with their companions in fortune, the reindeer, occupy the most northern parts of the globe."

For this diametral difference in the direction of migration, climatal variations may have been responsible, for the reader must remember that in dealing with these super-ancient representatives of humanity we are also dealing with lapses of time that make what we have hitherto regarded as historical antiquity seem quite close at hand.

Against the background of an Aurignacian sunset poor Tutankh-Amen's interment in the valley of the Egyptian kings appears with the distinctness of a last year's pageant. Twenty thousand years before Moses climbed the fire-smitten rocks of Sinai, Magdalenean artists were painting mammoths, bisons, horses and reindeer in the gloomy recesses of the Font de Gaume cavern above Les Eyzies, while thousands of years still earlier, the Aurignacians had carved their "Venus de Laussel" in the limestone of the same valley.

And then think, if it should be true, of the descendants of these people of the dawn, lingering out their forgotten time in the dark jungles of remotest Africa, and the snow-buried huts of the polar cap!

DRESS

By Mary Marshall

The Linen Frocks with Sleeveless Jacket Fills Many a Summer Need

Some women, it would seem, have never felt the prejudice against appearing in city streets without wearing some sort of wrap. These unprejudiced ones would reason that there is no more reason why a woman should wear or carry a wrap when the temperature verges eighty or ninety than there is sense in carrying an umbrella under a cloudless sky or a parasol at night. So they blithely go shopping, wearing a suit skirt, white blouse, sans the jacket which is left home when the weather permits. Attractive little stenographers go debonairely to work every warm summer morning wearing thin cotton frocks, pink organdie, yellow dotted swiss, blue voile, and never bother their heads over the fact that they neither carry nor wear any sign of a wrap.

Doubtless they are to be congratulated. They at least are cooler than the woman who carries with her the prejudice against going wrapless on city streets. Just where this prejudice came from is hard to say. It does not seem to be peculiarly American, nor specially derived from France. Still there are French women, as there are Americans, who feel actually undressed outdoors without something over frock or gown.

For summer days the French dressmaker is very fond of the chiffon or georgette frock with accompanying wrap, of chiffon likewise. Some dressmakers seem to take it for granted that every afternoon frock will need some appropriate wrap.

There are few costumes more serviceable and comfortable in summer than the one consisting of a frock of linen and voile or some similar thin fabric accompanied with a sleeveless linen jacket. A sleeveless linen jacket certainly gives very little either of weight or warmth. Yet accoutered with this sleeveless jacket even the most conservative among us would feel that she had made as much concession to convention as necessary. The sketch shows a gown of this sort—of powder blue linen with a bodice of matching voile in same shade. The voile is tucked all over. The jacket of linen is double breasted it being double below the waistline could be spoken of as being "double breasted."

WHEN YOUR FRIENDS SAIL

Each year shows more interesting boxes and baskets to send for bon voyage to travelers.

Of course the majority of these packages are made up for the traveler starting out by steamer for Europe. However, there are smaller ones for trans-continental travelers that are also quite attractive.

Some of the shops import baskets and their contents from the British Isles for us to give our friends starting out for that very spot. A bit like carrying coals to Newcastle, doubtless, but just the same these baskets are quite interesting. They contain Scotch taffee and marmalade, English biscuits, and a package of very good tea.

There is also a Chinese tea box There is also a Chinese tea box containing a box of Chinese rice wafers, two packages of China tea and a bottle of preserved Chinese fruits.

The ordinary home-packed basket contains different combinations. Sometimes tea and jam and candy and wafers of some kind; sometimes salted nuts and candied fruits and half a dozen different boxes of wafers and biscuits. Sometimes these baskets show combinations of fresh fruit and candy or salted nuts, and sometimes combinations of flowers and fruits are made.

There are book and magazine baskets and boxes, too, with magnifying glasses added as a final touch.

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

BY WM. F. KIRK

Pa tooked me up in the Zoo gardings yesterday. I dident want to go & rubber at a lot of animiles but Pa wanted me to go so I goed, that is the sistem, O-bay yure old gent & yure mother & than thay wont start nothing.

Wen we got to the Zoo thare was a long and tall burd standing neer a pond & Pa pointed at that burd & sed Bobbie, do you know the naim of that burd?

Nb, I sed.

Well, sed Pa, that is a crain, one of the noablest burds in Cappertifity, sed Pa. The anshunts used to worship them crains, sed Pa, on account of thare long necks wich was all the time looking up at Hevven, Bobbie, sed Pa.

Will peepul with long necks git to hevven quicker than peepul with short necks? I sed.

I guess not, Bobbie, sed Pa. Our necks aint got anything to do with our morils, sed Pa.

Thay have, too, I sed. Wen we bow our necks to say prayers that maiks us better, doant it? I sed.

Purely, Bobbie, sed Pa. Saying prayers is all rite, Bobbie, sed Pa, but we shud leed the kind of lifes that is prayers themselfs, Bobbie, sed Pa. If a Yegg robs a bank & then says a prayer it won git him anywares, Bobbie, sed Pa. & good men are not all the time saying prayers & asking for a lot of things thay doant dee-serve, Bobbie, sed Pa. Live a good life, Bobbie, sed Pa, that is the best prayer you can make, sed Pa.

If a crain sed a prayer cud it git a shorter neck? I sed.

No, Bobbie, sed Pa. We must talk the sort of necks & heds, etc. wich we have given to us by Nater Bobbie, sed Pa. If we say any prayers, sed Pa, we shud pray that we will always do our best, Pa sed. If we always do our best here, it will be O. K. with us in the heer-after, sed Pa.

If that crain does its best will it be O. K. in the haerafter? I sed.

Yes, Bobbie, sed Pa.

& will its neck be jest as long? I sed.

I suppose so, Bobbie, sed Pa. A crain wud feel funny with a short neck.

Will yure noase be just as long in the heer-after? I sed to Pa.

Is my nose so vary long, Bobbie? sed Pa.

It is pritty long, Pa, I sed. I am a boy scout & I nevver lie.

Well, Bobbie, sed Pa, I guass we will be prity much the saim in the heer-after as we are here, sed Pa. Now do not ask any moar questuns, sed Pa. BY J. J. MUNDY

Are you slow and negligent in returning money borrowed from friends. Isn't it true that, when you borrow money without security from someone friendly enough to lend it to you, you put off repaying that friend until you can do so with the least possible inconvenience to yourself?

Did you ever consider that your friend may be in need of the money you have borrowed but hesitates to embarrass you?

And so he does not ask you for what belongs to him.

No matter how strong your friendship, remember that you weaken it if you borrow and your friend gets the idea that you do not return the money as soon as you might.

There is no agency that will strain and sever a friendship more completely than an unpaid debt between friends.

The friend who feels he is being neglected while you may be favoring others cannot be blamed for allowing his friendly feelings to cool.

Borrowng and loaning among friends, unless carried on business principles is a friendship wrecker, sooner or later.

Asserts Medicine Must Now Take The Offensive

Toronto, Aug. 6.—Recent developments in the world-wide war on disease were described tonight at the opening meeting of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, at Toronto University, by Major Gen. Sir David Bruce, President of the Association, and a pioneer in the modern attack on infections disease, famous as the eradicator of Malta fever.

Sir David Bruce is one of 540 distinguished scientists who have made the voyage from England to attend this convention. The members of the American Association for the Advancement of Science have been made members of the British association for the purposes of this meeting, and several of the leading scientists of the United States will make addresses during the sessions, which will last a week. Altogether the scientists in attendance number 2,000.

After presenting an astonishing series of statistics to show the efficacy of vaccines and serums in war and peace, the President of the association said that the great future of medicine lay, not in vaccines and remedies, but in the more fundamental assault on causes.

"Medicine in the future," he said "must change its strategy and, instead of awaiting attack, must assume the offensive." The old conception of dealing with disease, he said, was that of treating its victims. But hereafter, he continued, the scientific services must be well followed in the enemy's country, destroying lines of communication, aerodromes, munition factories and poison gas centers, so that the main body of the army may march forward to safety.

ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION'S GREAT WORK

The speaker became nearly rhapsodical in his description of the achievements of the Rockefeller Foundation in carrying the war on disease into the enemy's country and exterminating the carriers of disease germs so thoroughly that, in the case of yellow fever, for example, the foundation had almost completely wiped the scourge from the face of the earth.

"It would take more than one address," he said, "to describe the activities of the Rockefeller Foundation alone. Campaigns of the relief and control of hookworm disease, malaria control, the eradication of yellow fever, anti-tuberculosis work and education are being pursued on such a scale and at such a lavish expenditure of money as to leave us in the old country breathless with admiration and envy.

"Science," he continued, 'indeed knows no boundaries of nations, languages and creeds. It is truly international. We are all children of one father. The advance of knowledge in the causation and prevention of disease is not for the benefit of one country, but for all—for lonely African native, deserted by his tribe, dying in the jungle of sleeping sickness, or the Indian or Chinese coolie dying miserably of beri-beri, just as much as for the citizens of our own towns. Man has come into his heritage and seems now to possess some particle of the universal creative force in virtue of which he can wrest from nature the secrets so jealously guarded by her, and bend them to his own desire.

"But let there be no mistake. Much has been done, but much more remains to be done. Mankind is still groaning and travelling under a grievous burden of weight and pain, sickness and disease. Interruptions are sure to come in the future, as they have in the past, in the work of removing the incubus. But in spite of these it is duty of science to go steadily forward, illuminating the dark places in hope of happier times."

In his discussion of the great progress in lessenting tuberculosis the speaker said that it had been showed that the majority of the popula-

May be copied, our methods imitated,
But O.I.C. Service can never be equalled in the fitting of Comfortable-Becoming Classes at Reasonable Prices

Established two decades by one of the first foreign opticians in Shanghai, we are the first extensive and Largest Optical Advertisers in the Orient.

We were first to incorporate the Service of Oculist—Optometrist—Optician together with our own completely equipped manufacturing laboratory on the premises.

The O.I.C. has grown faster than any other local optician.

We were first to formulate and publish a Standard Guarantee of both our Examination and Glasses.

We were first to inaugurate a standard "one price" system on all frames—with prices marked in plain figures.

We were first to offer Genuine Sir Wm. Crookes' Toric Lenses ground to any prescription for $5.00 per pair, when others charge from $15 to $25.00. We were first to instant a repair Service whereby we duplicate and replace any broken lense for $1.00—regardless of the prescription in genuine Toric, Flat, White or Crookes Glass.

We were first to inaugurate "No charge for Small Repairs"—"Lense Duplicated while you wait"—"Cases and Antiseptic Cleaners Free"—"No charge for adjustments—Springs or Screws." Proof That O.I.C. is appreciated is in the fact that the leading business and professional men in China, including our Municipal Councillors are sponsors of O.I.C. Service and wearers of O.I.C. Glasses.

LIEUT. MAUGHAN REPORTS TO HIS CHIEFS

GEN PATRICK, SECY. WEEKS & LIEUT. MAUGHAN.

Having successfully completed the first dawn-to-dusk flight across the American Continent, Lieutenant Russell Maughan, U. S. Army Air Service, has reported to his chiefs in the War Department in Washington. He is shown here in conversation with General Mason Patrick, head of the Air Service, and Secretary of War Weeks.

tion of crowded cities had at one time or another been attacked by the disease, but that in most cases the person attacked possessed powers of resistance which enabled him either to destroy the invading bacilli or deal with them so as to render them harmless.

IMMUNITY GAINED IN CHILDHOOD

"A point of importance in this connection," he continued, "is that it has recently been demonstrated that the disease is usualy acquired in childhood. The fact is of capital significance, for if the disease is recognised sufficiently early, and the child is placed under good hygienic conditions, there is a very good chance of effective resistance and immunity against a second attack being set up.

"The present evidence goes to show that the presence of the latent tubercle prevents a second invasion. If further outbreaks take place, this would seem to be due to a flaring up of the old latent tubercle rather than to a fresh infection.

"The experience of colonial troops in the late war is instructive. Thus, in France the Senegalese, who are almost without tuberculosis in their native condition, and were found to be free from tuberculosis on reaching France, developed in large numbers an acute and fatal form of tuberculosis in spite of the hygienic measures enforced by the army authorities.

"This raises a curious point. If it was possible for any country to clear itself of the tubercle bacillus, it would appear to be incurring a great risk for an inhabitant to migrate into any neighboring country.

"But in spite of all this, it is the duty of medical men to keep in check, as far as possible, the ravages of the disease.

"The preventive measures against tuberculosis at the present time are, in the first place, improvement in the general hygienic conditions. Thereby individual resistance—and communal resistance—can be remarkably increased.

"In the second place, as every case of tuberculosis must arise from a previous case, either human or bovine, it is very necessary that methods of early diagnosis, preventive treatment and segregation of the more infective types should be employed. This is done by the setting up of tuberculosis dispensaries, care committees, sanatoria, hospitals and colonies. These several elements are combined in the model tuberculosis scheme which is now universal throughout Great Britain.

"In the third place, much can be done to anticipate and limit the progress of infection by the use of tuberculin, but caution is required in assessing the claims, sometimes hasty and extravagant, advanced by adventurers in this field of research."

STRATEGY DEVELOPED IN WAR ON DISEASES

Many of the discoveries made and victories won in the war on the so-called protozoal diseases, such as malaria and sleeping sickness, were described by the President of the association in such a manner as to show how the new strategy in fighting disease had been gradually developed.

"We find that up to the present little can be done by way of vaccination or inoculation or by the use of these protozoal parasites," he said. "However, it is found that many of them depend on an intermediate insect host for their continued existence, and it is by taking advantage of this characteristic that the methods of prevention can be devised.

"To illustrate this, I might cite the classical examples of malaria and yellow fever, but as these must be familiar to you all. I shall take instead the trypanosome diseases of Africa, the best known of which are sleeping sickness in man and nagana or tsetse-fly disease in the domestic animals.

"In 1894, a year after Theobald Smith and Kilborne had published their famous monograph on Texas fever, a severe epidemic among native cattle in the north of Zululand was reported to the Natal Government. The disease was called nagana by the natives, and it is curious that there was no suspicion at the time that it had any connection with the tsetse fly.

"At this time a very enlightened administrator, the late Sir Walter Hely-Hutchinson, was Governor of Natal and Zululand, and it was due to him that the investigation of the cause of the Zululand outbreak was at once undertaken. I happened to be stationed in Natal at this time. I was chosen to undertake the work and at once started on the long journey, mostly by ox wagon, to the scene of the outbreak.

"On examination of the blood of the nagana cattle, a minute active flagellated protozoal parasite belonging to the genus trypansome, was discovered, and after many experiments on dogs, horses and cattle it was decided that in all probability it was the cause of the disease.

"Trypanosomes had previously been described in the blood of rats and horses in India by Timothy Lewis and Griffin Evans, but nothing was known as to the mode of their transmission from animal to animal.

"It seemed as if the discovery of the nagana trypanosome would have ended the investigation in Zululand without any means of preventing the disease being discovered, but another observation made at this time threw more light on the subject.

"In the low country between the high ground, on which the nagana camp was situated, and the sea there happened to be a so-called 'fly belt.'

"Every schoolboy had read about the tsetse fly in books of travelers and hunters, especially in those by the most famous of them all. David Livingstone, the missionary, and out of curiosity I decided to find out what happened when an aniaml was bitten by the fly, or, as it was termed, fly-struck.

DISEASE TRACED TO THE TSETSE FLY

"Natives were therefore sent with cattle and dogs into this 'fly country' with orders to form a camp and expose the animals to the bites of the fly. This was done and it was with great surprise that on their return to the hill the blood of these fly-struck animals was found to contain the same parasite as that found in the nagana cattle.

"Nagana and tsetse fly were finally proved to be identical. The tsetse fly disease was shown to be caused, not as had been believed, by the poisonous bite of the fly, but by the transference of a protozoal parasite from the fly to the animal in the act of sucking blood.

"Now the question arose as to where the fly found the parasite. As the tsetse fly constantly lived among and fed on wild game, such as buffalo and antelope, these animals were suspected. Their blood was examined and before long it became evident that the wild animals acted as the reservoir of the disease, the trypanosomes living in their blood as harmless parasites. When the tsetse fly fed on blood containing the trypanosome it became infected and was capable by its bite of giving rise to a fatal disease in cattle, horses, or dogs, whereas if it fed on wild animals nothing happened, as the wild game are immune to the disease, much in the same way as the goat is immune to Malta fever.

"Now that the natural history of the disease had been so far worked out it was evident that its prevention might be attempted.

"This can be done in any of three ways by getting rid of the wild game, the reservoir, or by getting rid of the fly, the vector or carrier, or lastly, by removing the cattle, horses and dogs to a safe distance from the 'fly country.'

"This work on Nagana led later, in 1903, to the discovery of the cause and mode of prevention of sleeping sickness.

"About the beginning of the century an epidemic of this disease raged around the shores of Lake Victoria in Central Africa. It had been introduced into Uganda from the West Coast, where it had been known for many years as a curious and unaccountable disease. It was observed that although the disease spread to a West African village from man to man apparently by contact, no such thing occurred among natives away from their homes. The disease never spreads if introduced into native compounds in the West Indies, or America, however closely the slaves might be herded together.

"The disease remained shrouded in mystery and nothing had been done in the way of prevention until the matter was taken up by the Royal Society of London in 1902 and a commission sent out to investigate.

"It is not necessary to go into details; suffice to say that after one or two false starts the commission in 1903 came to the conclusion that the disease was caused, as in Nagana, by a species of typanosoma. The question of the distribution of sleeping sickness in Ugana was then taken up. This disclosed the remarkable fact that the disease was restricted to the numerous islands in the northern part of the lake and to a narrow belt of country skirting the shores of the lake. In no part of Uganda were cases found more than a few miles from the lake shore.

"The next important step in the working out of the etiology was made when it was shown that the distribution of the disease was identical with the distribution of the common tsetse fly of the country, glossina palpalis. Where there was no fly there was no sleeping sickness.

"The problem was now solved. The epidemic could be stopped quicker by getting rid of the fly or by removing the natives out of the fly area. As the destruction of the fly was impracticable under the circumstances the second method was decided on. The natives were moved from the islands and lake shore and placed on healthful inland sites, and the epidemic which had cost the protectorate some hundred thousand lives speedily came to an end.
